Stocks Waver, French Party Leaders Unite To Calm Fear

Socialist, Devaluation Advocate Unite With Rightist Group.

Cabinet, Le Brun To Confer Today

Wall Street Watches Franc, Fearing Allied Gold Bloc Crisis.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, May 8.—Warring French political leaders joined forces tonight to calm fears of possible financial disaster.

Heavy gold shipments abroad and a wildly fluctuating stock market reflected public fears that political struggles might destroy confidence and bring revaluation of the franc.

Relieved over the regular week-end holiday, which would prevent further fluctuation in the franc's value, the cabinet planned a session with President Albert Lebrun for tomorrow.

Transactions on the stock exchange prices rising and falling indiscriminately on what operators described as a "disorderly" market in the face of increases in foreign exchange premiums.

Premiums Boosted.

"Future purchases in foreign exchange are tending to become virtually impossible," financial circles declared, after the premiums were boosted to 1.25 francs for three months on dollar operations and 6.75 francs on British pound operations.

This made them equivalent approximately to 33 and 35 per cent on an annual basis.

Leon Blum, Socialist leader, moved to the support of Premier Albert Sarraut, asserting the cabinet's premature resignation "would have whipped up a money and stock market panic."

"It remains to be seen," he added, "if the government's efforts (to maintain the value of the franc) will be effective."

Sarraut, cautioning against apprehension over Socialist measures which he described as "still only theoretical," was quoted as saying Frenchmen "hold their fate in their own hands."

Socialists Meet Tomorrow.

The Socialist executive committee planned a meeting for Sunday and there were possibilities for a leftist demonstration the same day.

Gold shipments abroad continued as the Deutschland sailed for New York with 168 boxes of gold valued at 141,000,000 francs. Financial circles estimated withdrawals from savings banks since January 1 approximated 660,000,000 francs.

Paul Reynaud, devaluationist, joined with other political leaders in asserting the "first duty of the opposition is not to harm the credit of the government."

"The Socialist party which is going to take power certainly will keep its word," he said, "and show it is concerned with the governmental necessities which are outside any program of any party."

Blum, Sarraut, and Edouard Daladier, head of the Radical Socialists, conferred, the discussion presumably centering on measures by which to cope with the financial situation until the Chamber of Deputies meets.

N. Y. Watches Franc.

New York, May 8 (AP).—Wall Street banking circles, anxiously studying the swift cross-currents of French politics, expressed fears tonight the French franc might crumble, thus bringing a crisis to allied gold bloc currencies.

While francs for immediate settlement held comparatively steady at 6.58⅝ cents with the aid of official support, the price of French currency deliverable in 90 days cracked wide open to a discount of .55 of a cent under the immediate rate, the widest since May 31, 1935.

Grave symptoms of a threatened run on the franc, bankers said, were the heavy speculative pressure

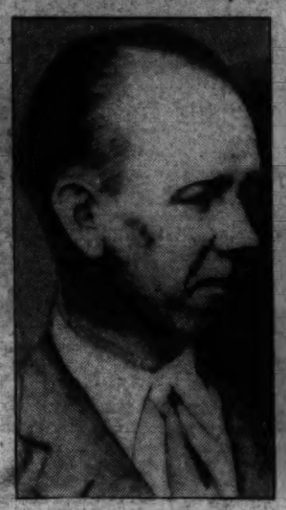
Held in $200,000 Mail Robberies



CHARLES ROBERT.

OLIVER P. ARNOLD.

Denver Banker, 10 Others Held In 30 Mail Robberies in West

Lawyer Also Arrested in Colorado City as Fleeing Politician, Underworld Leader Are Hunted; Loot in 6 States Estimated at $200,000.

By the Associated Press.

Denver, May 8.—Thirty mail robberies that netted $200,000 in a half dozen Northwestern and Middle Western States were believed solved day with the arrest of a Denver banker, an attorney and nine other persons, Thomas J. Morrissey, Federal district attorney, said.

A well-known Denver politician and an underworld character fled Denver and their arrests are expected soon, Morrissey added.

Oliver P. Arnold, assistant vice president of the Denver National Bank, was arrested at his desk. Arnold, charged with being a party to the conspiracy, denied any part in the affair. The attorney, Charles Robert, was taken in custody on a Denver street.

The other nine persons were arrested in Denver, Denison, Iowa; St. Paul and Park Rapids, Minn.

Morrissey said the gang was organized by Jack Segar, of St. Paul.

"Segar in some way obtained in Denver a set of railroad switch keys and keys to fit registered mail bags," Morrissey said.

"With these keys the gang looted registered mail bags in railroad depots at night and disposed of the loot here in Denver."

Besides Arnold, Roberts, and Segar, others under arrest, Morrissey said, included Othello G. McClellan, 36, auto salesman; Ralph A. Clifton, 48, radio salesman; Harold P. Kenedy, 29; Elmer F. Trower, 48, and John M. McBride, 44, all of Denver.

Winston Walker, 30, was arrested at Denison, Harold Bailey at Park Rapids, Minn., and John Edwards, 25, at St. Paul. Morrissey said Edwards used an assumed name and was a member of a "respectable Denver family."

"After Segar obtained the keys he went to St. Paul and recruited a gang consisting of Walker, Bailey, and Edwards," Morrissey announced.

"With the railroad keys and the mail sack keys they could open mail sacks, take out the registered mail and, leaving things as they found them inside the depot, flee.

McMullen Gets 6-Month Term, Fine of $1,000

Army Man Free on Bond Pending Appeal of Tax Fee Verdict.

Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue, in the District Supreme Court, yesterday sentenced Col. Joseph I. McMullen, grizzled Army veteran and erstwhile chief of the patents section of the War Department, to a term of six months in jail and a fine of $1,000 following his conviction ten days ago on a charge of accepting a fee from a private firm for opposing legislation in which the United States Government was interested.

Deviating from the usual rule of the court, Justice O'Donoghue permitted Col. McMullen to remain at liberty on a bond of $2,000 while his appeal is pending.

The charge against Col. McMullen is that he accepted a fee of $1,500 from the Cuban-American Manganese Corporation for his services in opposing a then-pending bill in Congress which would have placed a heavy excise duty on manganese imports. It was shown that the War Department was interested in "killing" the proposed tax because manganese is an important factor in armaments and an increase in duty taxes would have resulted in substantial increases in armaments.

William E. Leahy and William J. Hughes, attorneys for Col. McMullen, and David A. Pine, chief assistant United States attorney, agreed that there "was a substantial question of law involved" in the McMullen appeal and suggested to Justice O'Donoghue that he permit the defendant to remain on bond pending the outcome of his appeal.

The Army officer has steadfastly denied he intended to violate the law in accepting the fees.

Stock Promoter Indicted on 15 Counts in Sale of $800,000 Securities.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 8.—A Federal grand jury today returned a 15-count indictment charging mail fraud and misrepresentations against J. Edward Jones, oil securities promoter, who recently was upheld by the United States Supreme Court in his refusal to recognize a subpena issued by the Securities Exchange Commission.

The indictment alleges that Jones induced Warren D. Brown, of New York, and other persons to purchase participation certificates amounting to $800,000 in the J. Edward Jones Royalty Trusts by false promises and fraudulent pretenses.

Conviction would entail a possible 75-year prison term and $15,000 fines.

Shortly after the indictment was handed up, Jones issued a statement charging the Government with seeking revenge for his Supreme Court victory.

"This is mad persecution advanced to the most pitiable stages of New Dealirium," he declared. "Smarting under a scorching chastisement administered by the United States Supreme Court for illegally hounding me by an 'odious and inquisitorial star chamber proceedings,' the Government, 24 hours following the court's memorable decision, convened a grand jury to indict me. * * * *

"What has been persecution aplenty of me, has now, following my Supreme Court victory, given place to revenge. But the face of an agency of the executive branch of our National Government cannot be saved from the effect of severe excoriation by our judiciary through continual hounding of an individual to his eventua ruination."

Zeppelin, Nearing U. S. Coast, To Reach Lakehurst at Dawn

By the United Press.

Lakehurst, N. J., May 8.—The giant Zeppelin Hindenburg sped toward New York tonight with her passengers already drinking toasts to a safe record crossing of the Atlantic. She was due to arrive at sunrise.

The Hindenburg was within an hour's sailing time of the United States coast at 10:30 p. m. (Eastern Standard Time), tonight, Dr. Max Jordan, radio expert aboard the big ship, told the National Broadcasting Co. in New York in a broadcast from the airship.

"We expect to be over Lakehurst, N. J., between 5 and 5:30 a. m. tomorrow," Dr. Jordan said. "The ship has been slowed to make our arrival time coincide with preparations made by the ground crew in Lakehurst."

The Zeppelin was "running like mad," her commander reported.

The Hindenburg will be favored with perfect airship weather when it arrives here, according to a weather forecast issued shortly before 10:30 p. m.

A carnival atmosphere prevailed in this quiet Jersey town as it waited to greet the world's largest airship. The Hindenburg will be berthed in the Navy's giant hangar that formerly housed the ill-fated American dirigibles Akron and Macon.

Arrangements were completed tonight for landing, housing and servicing the air giant, pending her return trip to Germany Monday night. The public will be allowed to visit the ship in the hangar from 8 a. m.

Sutton Guilty; Gets Life in Wilson Case

State Demands Death in Final Plea; Cleary Again Testifies.

By Frederic B. Tuttle.
A Staff Correspondent.

Cumberland, Md., May 8.—Albert Stavely Sutton, "Bumps" to his friends in racketland, was found guilty of first-degree murder, without capital punishment, here tonight for the "mistaken identity" murder of Allen B. Wilson, newspaper route agent.

The Allegany County jury of merchants, farmers, railroad and factory workers deliberated but an hour and one minute before deciding the lanky gangster must spend the rest of his life in the penitentiary.

At 6:04 p. m. Chief Justice Lindley D. Sloan gave the case to the veniremen. They retired and took 40 minutes for dinner. At 7:45 p. m. there was a knock at the old-fashioned door of the jury room in the county courthouse. The verdict was ready.

When word was flashed to Justice Sloan, Sutton was led from his cell into the courtroom.

Sutton smiled weakly at a few people he recognized as he passed through the hallway into the courtroom. When the jury filed in, Sutton, the "iron man" of other days, breathed rapidly. His gray collar and black necktie rose and fell swiftly.

The verdict was announced by Harry J. Shupe, middle-aged insurance agent, who is foreman of the jury.

Appeal Planned.

Immediately after hearing the verdict, F. Brook Whiting, of defense council, informed the bench an immediate appeal would be filed. Sutton was led back to the county jail, where Albert McDermott, alias John (Slim) Dunn, his crony and associate in the plot to kill McDonald, has been held since a similar verdict was returned against him by a different jury in the same courtroom on Wednesday.

McDermott will be sentenced tomorrow morning, as, probably, will Sutton.

Unless appeals are granted in the two cases, the final chapters have been written in the Wilson murder case.

Five men went out to kill McDonald, evidence which led to the convictions of the only three of them still alive has disclosed.

They were Claude Bailey and Anthony (Tony the Stinger) Cugino, both of whom died as violently as they had lived—Bailey in an attempted escape from Lorton Reformatory, and Cugino by his own hand in a New York jail cell; Ernest Wellington Myers, McDermott and William Henry Cleary.

Sutton was not at the scene of the murder, but it was Sutton, as the State convinced the jury today, who paid the five to have "Mickey" slain because he was allegedly turning up rival gaming establishments to the police.

No sooner had State's Attorney James H. Pugh finished his rebuttal argument than Chief Justice D. Lindley Sloan formally charged the jury.

As is usual in Maryland courts, the charge was brief and stressed the five verdicts which might be brought in—first degree, first degree without capital punishment, second degree, manslaughter and not guilty.

His wife beside him, Sutton sat in the sultry courtroom, his face expressionless, until he was handcuffed and led to his cell to await the verdict.

Five Possible Verdicts.

Only a few minutes before Justice Sloan issued his charge to the jurors, Sutton heard Pugh brand him as the "brains" that plotted to have Edward ("Micky") McDonald killed.

The hail of lead fired from behind a hedge opposite McDonald's Takoma Park house just before dawn on October 23, 1934, that brought death to Wilson, a newspaper route carrier, was intended for the colorful Washington gambler, the boyhood chum of Sutton.

"This man Sutton, who sits here before you, plotted and schemed to kill McDonald," shouted Pugh, pointing to the prisoner.

During his argument Pugh stressed the testimony on which he hoped to hang Sutton—what two confessed underworld "characters" have said about being hired to kill McDonald.

But the defense—represented by F. Brook Whiting and J. Philip Roman—had its own spectacular innings today when it placed an entirely different emphasis on the testimonies of Cleary and Jenkins.

Early in the afternoon Roman, Cumberland criminal lawyer and

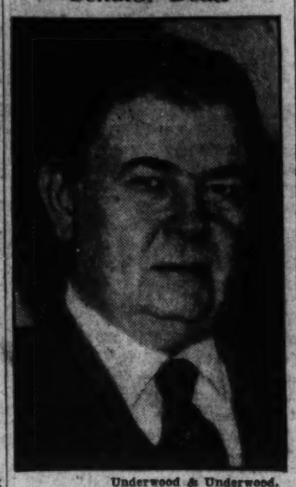
Archbishop Diaz Of Mexico Dying

Mexico City, May 8 (U.P.).—Archbishop Pascual Diaz, primate of the Catholic Church in Mexico since 1912, was near death tonight from colitis.

The strength of the prelate, who is 59, was slowly ebbing. His physicians indicated little hope of saving his life.

The Archbishop has been a central figure for several years in the religious strife between church and state in Mexico. On numerous occasions he has been arrested and either jailed or fined or exiled. He often was charged by anti-clericals with plotting the overthrow of the government.

Senator Dead



Underwood & Underwood.
SENATOR PARK TRAMMELL.

Sen. Trammell, Of Florida, Dies At Home Here

Cerebral Hemorrhage Ends Six Weeks Illness; Was Big Navy Champion.

Senator Park Trammell (Democrat), of Florida, died last night at his home here, 2633 Sixteenth street northwest, after an illness of six weeks. He was 60.

Dr. W. A. Bloedorn said the cause of death was a cerebral hemorrhage.

Senator Trammell, serving his fourth term, was the fourth member of the Senate in the Seventy-fourth Congress to die, the others being Bronson Cutting, of New Mexico; Huey Long, of Louisiana, and Thomas Schall, of Minnesota.

He is survived by his second wife, the former Beatrice Mesmer, of Lakeland, Fla., whom he married in August, 1934. His first wife, who was Virginia Darby, died in 1922.

Naval Committee Member.

From the time he came to Capitol Hill in 1917, Trammell was a member of the Senate Committee on Naval Affairs. As such he was always a strong advocate of American preparedness. When the Democrats took over control of the Senate after the Roosevelt landslide of 1932, Trammell became chairman of the naval committee. He was co-author of the Vinson-Trammell "Big Navy" bill passed at the last session.

As far back as July, 1934, Trammell predicted that the London naval conference of 1935 would be a failure. He predicted that Japan would insist on naval parity with the United States and Great Britain, and he urged the upbuilding of the American Navy to full treaty strength, with at least 2,500 planes to maintain the country's naval defenses.

Five hours before Trammell died, the Senate passed the largest peacetime naval appropriation bill in this country's history, a bill that should bring nearer the Florida statesman's hope of a treaty Navy.

For some time prior to his second marriage, Senator Trammell slept in his office in the big Senate Office Building, thus saving hotel or apartment rent. The money thus saved he gave to an invalid relative.

Trammell was born April 9, 1876, in Macon County, Ala. He was 5 when his parents moved to Lakeland, a college town in central Florida. He attended the public schools there, and later studied law at Cumberland University, Lebanon, Tenn., receiving his degree in 1899.

He began practicing law in Lakeland and at the same time entered politics. He was successful from the outset, being elected mayor of Lakeland the same year he got his law degree.

Before he went to law school, Trammell worked as a store clerk. Afterward he did many other things besides practicing law. He was a newspaper publisher, a traveling salesman and a fruit grower.

Elected to Legislature.

But he never strayed far away from politics. After serving a second term as mayor of Lakeland, he was elected a member of the Florida House of Representatives. In 1904 he became a State Senator, and was soon made president of the State Senate.

From 1909 to 1913 he was Attorney General of Florida. That post became a springboard to the office of Governor, which he filled from 1913 to 1917. While still Governor, he ran for the United States Senate and was elected, taking his seat March 4, 1917.

He was re-elected for his fourth six-year term in November, 1934. This term began in January, 1935, and was to run to 1941.

Told of Trammell's death, Duncan U. Fletcher, the senior Senator from Florida, said:

"I am very much shocked to hear of this. I had supposed he was improving and had no idea he was getting worse. He was a very fine man and a faithful servant—very conscientious. His death is a great loss to the State."

Mercury Hits 92; No Relief in Sight

Broiling summer weather struck Washington yesterday and hoisted the Weather Bureau's thermometer up to 92 at 3:30 p. m., a record high for the year and an all-time record for May 8.

All through the night, the mercury continued to hover around the 80 and 90 degree mark. But the weatherman predicted no letup from sun and heat.

For today, he promised:

"Fair and warmer and no rain in sight."

The previous high mark for the year was recorded April 21, when the thermometer climbed to 86 degrees.

Wendel Case Role Is Told By Governor

Hoffman Admits He Was Responsible for Young Parker's Actions.

Scores Fort in Replying to His Questions; Also Attacks Geoghan.

By the United Press.

Newark, N. J., May 8.—Gov. Harold G. Hoffman took full responsibility tonight for the strange series of events which landed Paul H. Wendel in a Trenton jail—charged with the murder of Charles A. Lindbergh, jr.—at a time when New Jersey was preparing to electrocute Bruno Richard Hauptmann for that crime.

Making his first public explanation of the kidnaping and torturing of Wendel, Hoffman admitted in a speech tonight that he knew Wendel had been seized and was being held because he received reports about it from Ellis Parker, jr. Parker, jr., son of the Burlington County detective who ultimately handed Wendel over to Trenton authorities, is under indictment in Kings County, New York, charged with kidnaping and second degree assault.

Parker, jr., is a fugitive from justice, and Hoffman said tonight that it was doubtful whether he would grant extradition to New York if Parker is captured in New Jersey. The Governor admitted he detached young Parker from his duties as an employe in the motor fuel tax division in Trenton and sent him out to investigate the Hauptmann case. All this was done at a time when Hoffman already had granted a 30-day reprieve to Hauptmann and was searching for proof of his theory that someone besides the German carpenter was implicated in the Lindbergh crime.

Four Name Young Parker.

Wendel confessed to the Lindbergh murder, but subsequently repudiated that confession and said he had been tortured. Four other men besides young Parker are under indictment for kidnaping Wendel in New York. All of them have confessed, naming young Parker as the leader of the plot. Wendel later was taken to the New Lisbon colony for the feeble-minded in New Jersey and held there until the momentous night when the elder Parker delivered him to Trenton authorities at the order of Attorney General David T. Wilentz, of New Jersey.

Hoffman's speech tonight was more than an explanation of the Wendel affair; it was a political attack against Franklin Fort, who is opposing the Governor's candidacy as a delegate at large to the Republican National Convention. In passing, the Governor made sarcastic reference to District Attorney William F. X. Geoghan of Kings County, who is conducting the investigation of Wendel's abduction.

Wendel is a disbarred lawyer who has been under mental observation several times. Hoffman said Wendel had no one but himself to blame for getting involved in the Hauptmann case. Wendel, according to the Governor, voluntarily went to the elder Parker and said he knew the whereabouts of the Lindbergh baby. Hoffman said he had seen more than 30 letters, written in code, signed by Wendel and addressed to the elder Parker.

Scores Fort, Geoghan.

"On the basis of information now in my hands," Hoffman said, "I will not sacrifice the Parkers, either to satiate the political appetite of Mr. Fort or to save the face of a discredited Brooklyn district attorney who might better concern himself with an effort to clear up his own record in the handling of the notorious Drukman case."

Geoghan was superseded in the prosecution of the murderers of Samuel Drukman after he failed to get indictments against men who later were convicted by Special Prosecutor Hiram Todd.

Geoghan's only comment tonight was that "I am not mixed up in a New Jersey political campaign."

Last week Fort submitted a list of questions about the Wendel case to Hoffman. The Governor answered them tonight as follows:

Q. Did you "borrow" Ellis Parker, jr., from the State motor fuel tax department and assign him to extra-departmental special investigations?—A. Yes.

Q. Whence came the tip that started Parker, jr., on the course that led him to be indicted in Kings County, N. Y., for the Wendel kidnaping?—A. From Paul H. Wendel.

Q. Did Parker report his investigations periodically to any responsible New Jersey law-enforcement

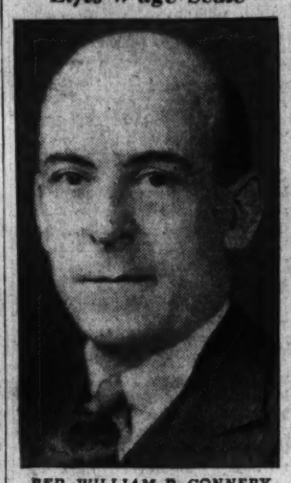
Prevailing Wage On Relief Work Voted by House

Lifts Wage Scale



REP. WILLIAM P. CONNERY.

Amendment to Fund Bill Calls for Union Scale or 'Local' Rates.

Grants to States Defeated, 103-33

Step Meets Demands of Labor; Buchanan Asks for Short Hours.

By Felix Bruner.

A provision making payment of prevailing wages to relief workers mandatory was written into the $1,425,000,000 relief appropriation bill by the House yesterday.

The provision, which was subject to weeks of debate in the last session of Congress, was adopted by unanimous consent. Administration leaders agreeing. The amendment was presented by Representative Connery (Democrat), Massachusetts.

Chairman Buchanan, of the Appropriations Committee, said that he would agree to the amendment with the understanding the hours of relief workers would be kept sufficiently short that they would not receive more than the usual subsistence wages for monthly periods.

The provision is one that has been fought for by organized labor since the beginning of Federal relief. It means that relief workers will be paid the same hourly wages as union men, or as other persons doing similar work in the community.

Present Situation.

Prevailing wages are being paid now in many places by the Works Progress Administration, and generally by the Public Works Administration. In communities where union labor has been particularly vocal, it has been the practice of the WPA to shift quietly to prevailing wage standards.

The deficiency bill, which includes the relief appropriation, and which carries a total appropriation of $2,364,229,712, was ready for passage by the House Monday.

Only one other important amendment was attached to the relief section of the bill. The amendment provides that aliens who are in the United States illegally may not be employed on work relief.

Every attempt of both Democratic and Republican groups to change the bill materially was overridden, either by out-of-order rules on proposed amendments or by overwhelming votes of opposition. The movement of Representative Beiter (Democrat), New York, to earmark a part of the appropriation for the Public Works Administration, headed by Secretary Ickes, was ruled out of order and not even permitted to come to a vote. It previously had been disapproved by a Democratic caucus Thursday night.

G. O. P. Effort Fails.

The principal Republican amendments, presented by Representative Taber, of New York, ranking member of the Appropriations Committee, providing that States be required to contribute at least 25 per cent to the cost of work relief, was defeated by a vote of 103 to 33. The amendment also would have provided for administration of local relief through nonpartisan boards.

"This is not a relief bill, but a bill to continue political jobs," Taber told the House. "If the States are compelled to make appropriations, they will have some incentive to see that relief is properly administered."

Taber said that without the amendment he would vote against the bill, that he could not vote "for ridiculous expenditures for ridiculous projects."

Representative Woodrum (Democrat) Virginia, a member of the Appropriations Committee, said that adoption of the Taber amendment

Corporate Levy Foes Weighing 2 Other Plans

Administration Opponents Study Alternates; Entire New Bill Urged.

By Robert C. Albright.

Outspoken conservative opposition to the Administration's proposed undistributed earnings tax yesterday crystallized around two outstanding substitute plans and an independent movement to write a completely new tax bill, as opponents strove to reach common ground at conferences over the week-end.

Nine Democratic members of the Senate Finance Committee were counted among those who would like to make sharp changes in the measure. As hearings came to a close yesterday, Democratic conservatives gathered in little groups to discuss revision. Further informal discussions are slated today and tomorrow.

Although Chairman Pat Harrison persistently predicted the final bill will embody the philosophy of the President's proposed undistributed corporate earnings tax, there was a growing prospect that the measure will be modified drastically.

Plans Favored.

Strong support was developing around each of the following two substitute plans, which as yet had assumed only tentative form:

1. Continuation of the corporation income tax at a flat rate of 12½ per cent, with a graduated surtax on undistributed corporate earnings superimposed, ranging possibly from 10 to 20 per cent.

2. A straight 5 per cent increase in the present 12½ to 15 per cent corporation income tax, to produce a new rate of 17½ to 20 per cent.

Both of these plans would be coupled with repeal of the existing normal income tax exemption on dividends. Coupled with this change, which is also a part of the President's proposal, either plan, it was claimed, would raise the $600,000,000 asked by the Administration, without serious damage to the present income tax structure.

Some significance was attached to a remark by the President at yesterday's White House press conference, during a discussion of the difficulties companies with weak capital structures are having in rehabilitating their position.

The President refrained from direct comment on the tax bill, but when a reporter asked if the pending tax plan would not impose further hardships on railroads and other companies trying to recoup their capital position, the President commented that this matter had not been settled yet.

This led to speculation on whether Mr. Roosevelt may modify his position against various proposed exemptions from the tax bill.

Conservative Democrats on the Senate Finance Committee who are believed to favor wide changes in the Administration's proposal include Senators William H. King, of Utah; Walter F. George, of Georgia; David I. Walsh of Massachusetts;

5 Saved, 145 Still Marooned In Southwestern Snowstorm

By the Associated Press.

Raton, N. Mex., May 8.—Without food and water for 12 hours, the first five of the 150 persons marooned by a spring snowstorm atop Raton Pass, were brought here late today by rescuing New Mexico state police.

The rescuers immediately started back to the snowbound transcontinental bus from which the five were taken to get the other 20 aboard.

Over a winding highway cleared by snow plows, some of the more than 20 automobiles stranded proceeded out of their blizzard prison under their own power. Some passengers walked in. Others caught rides with snow removal crews.

A raging blizzard isolated Trinidad, Colo., mining town of 11,000.

The town of Morley, Colo., on the north slope of the mile and a half high pass, was completely cut off from the outside world. Two buses reached Trinidad late today, having plowed through a snow-piled mountain highway which was impassable for hours.

Meanwhile, windstorms struck two Southwestern communities.

At least five persons were injured, one critically, by a windstorm at Hanna, Okla., 14 miles south of Henryetta.

The airplane schedule between Denver and El Paso was disrupted, communication lines were down in many areas and railroad trains were running hours late.

$529,000,000 Naval Measure Voted in Senate

Fight on Record Peace Appropriation Fails; Bill Goes to Conferees.

The $529,000,000 Navy appropriation for next year rode through the Senate yesterday and was sent on its way to conference and the White House without so much as a record vote. Opposition to the bill, which sets a record for Navy peace-time appropriations, was crushed by the majority steam roller.

Approval came quickly after an unsuccessful attempt by Senator Frazer (Republican), of North Dakota, and a group of inland Senators to strip from the bill authority for building 2 new battleships, 12 destroyers, and 8 submarines. The move, on a roll call, was beaten 40 to 12. Supporting the Frazier amendment, which would have knocked $115,000,000 from the bill, were Senators Benson and Shipstead (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota; Capper (Republican), Kansas; Clark (Democrat), Missouri; Donahey (Democrat), Ohio; King and Thomas (Democrat), Utah; Murphy (Democrat), Iowa; Murray (Democrat), Montana, and Pope (Democrat), Idaho.

The Navy bill is the last of the regular supply measures to go through the Senate, leaving only the $2,000,000,000 deficiency bill carrying the work relief funds, which was before the House yesterday.

Approval Held Assured.

Both Houses have already completed action on the $591,000,000 War Department appropriation bill, and it was sent to the White House Thursday. Presidential approval of both defense appropriations is regarded as assured.

Senator Frazier took the floor against the Navy bill soon after the Senate convened. He charged the entire bill was out of line with the Briand-Kellogg pact renouncing war, and he asserted, "Now it is proposed to build two of these floating arsenals."

Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, who piloted the bill through the Senate, explained the measure provided for new construction only in the event other London treaty signers began a Navy building program.

"Then this provision is just bluff?" Frazier asked.

"The language is clear," Byrnes replied. "It shows our willingness not to begin a Navy building program unless other great powers begin first."

Failing to carry his amendment, Frazier introduced a bill to punish by fine or imprisonment a newspaper or individual disseminating information in time of peace which tends to incite the country to war.

Proposes Defense Commission.

Senator Benson offered a resolution, which he declared was in keeping with the Democratic platform of 1932, proposing appointment of a civilian commission by the President to study and recommend a policy of national defense. The resolution was referred to the Military Affairs Committee.

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt intimated yesterday that the recently negotiated London Naval agreement may be submitted to the Senate next week for its advice and consent. Chairman Pittman (Democrat), Nevada, of the Foreign Relations Committee, announced hearings will begin Wednesday. He predicted an early and favorable report. However, he reserved a prediction on ratification at this session, which he said depended considerably on the legislative situation.

The pact, signed by the United States, Great Britain and France, would limit the size of certain types of warships, without any restriction on number, and it provides for exchange of information between the nations on contemplated construction programs. The United States sought a flat 20 per cent reduction in world warship tonnage, but Britain and Japan refused to agree with this position.

The Navy appropriation approved yesterday by the Senate assures that the huge building program inaugurated by President Roosevelt will be carried to completion, Navy Department officials believe.

374 Closed Banks Now Liquidated

The Comptroller of the Currency, J. F. T. O'Connor, announced yesterday the completion of the liquidation of 11 receiverships during April, 1936, making a total of 374 receiverships finally closed or restored to solvency since the so-called banking holiday of March, 1933.

Total disbursements, including offsets allowed, to depositors and other creditors of these 374 institutions, exclusive of the 42 receiverships restored to solvency, aggregated $104,148,226, or an average return of 75.04 per cent of total liabilities, while unsecured depositors received dividends amounting to an average of 60.14 per cent of their claims.

Belgians Charge Fort Plans Sold to Nazis

Brussels, May 8 (AP).—The newspaper L'Independance Belge disclosed today that secret plans for underground Belgian forts had been sold to a German agent for $500 by a construction foreman.

The foreman, Y. Schmets, has been arrested, the newspaper said. The plans purportedly were smuggled to Aachen, in the Rhineland, photographed and then returned to Belgium.

Police announced discovery of the plot yesterday. It allegedly was hatched in an underground fort in the Liege vicinity.

Capital Observers Get Impression New Deal Has Lost Sense of Direction.

By Franklyn Waltman

MANY observers of the Washington scene have the distinct impression that the New Deal has lost its sense of direction and is floundering around without a definite objective in mind.

WALTMAN

Ever since the New Deal started it has been marked by contradictions within its ranks, such as the internationalism of the reciprocal trade program and the isolated nationalism of AAA and NRA.

But recently even President Roosevelt in some of his public statements seems to be going in two directions at the same time. Perhaps it is due to efforts to be all things to all men as election day approaches. But then, perhaps, it is due to confusion of thought, resulting from weariness and the failure of some schemes which at the outset promised to be perfect cures.

For instance, speaking two weeks ago in New York the President assailed a proposal, which he said came from a recently organized "brain trust" not his own, that to get full recovery it was necessary "to lower prices by cheapened costs of production."

He sneeringly undertook to reduce this proposition to "plain English." Costs of production could be reduced, Mr. Roosevelt said, in two ways. One method, he said, was by developing new machinery, new technique and by increasing employe efficiency. He said "we do not discourage that" but he quickly warned that "we do not dodge the fact that this means fewer men employed and more men unemployed."

The second method of reducing production costs, he asserted, was to reduce wages or to lengthen working hours without increasing wages. He said he was opposed to that, insisting that the hope of America was higher wages, as well as higher prices.

And then the President laid down this conclusion: "Reduction of costs of manufacture does not mean more purchasing power and more goods consumed. It means just the opposite." As Ray Moley says in the current issue of Today, "this statement does not make sense." To say the least, as Mr. Moley does, "it was not too felicitously phrased."

But that is not the point of this piece. The point is to contrast what Mr. Roosevelt said in his New York speech—two weeks ago—with what he said at his press conference yesterday. In recent days Mr. Roosevelt has had conferences with a number of important industrialists, including Walter P. Chrysler, the motor magnate; Owen D. Young, Gerard Swope, Walter C. Teagle, Bernard M. Baruch and others.

The President revealed that the reason for these conferences was his desire to stimulate employment, especially in two industries that have been lagging—railroad equipment and housing. In the latter field, he explained, there had been substantial activity in the construction of moderate and high-price homes—but what hundreds of families needed and what the building industries needed, he added, was a boom in the building of cheap homes for small wage-earners, homes that could be sold for about $2,500.

The solution of the problem, asserted the President, was mass production of cheap homes. He illustrated his point by reciting how he had asked Mr. Chrysler how much it would cost if he took to a local machine shop blueprints for one of Mr. Chrysler's automobiles and asked that a car be built for him strictly according to the specifications. Mr. Chrysler replied, the President said, the cost would be about $3,500. Yet Mr. Chrysler by making such an automobile in large numbers can sell it, at a profit, for around $600.

Pointing to the moral of his story, the President asserted that thus home construction must be on a volume—not a local machine shop basis.

Thus in his talk to the press the President urged the cheapening of the costs of production in home construction in order to stimulate employment and revive the building industries—as well as to give hundreds of thousands decent housing. He did not urge any reduction in wages or lengthening of hours, to be sure, but he advocated the application of improved technique and efficiency—developments, which he said at New York would mean "fewer men employed and more men unemployed."

And the President used as his illustration of what was wrong with the housing situation the success of the automobile industry, achieved through low prices and volume production, the very antithesis of the President's New York proposition in favor of high prices and his NRA and AAA schemes for restricted production.

It might be assumed that the distinguished industrialists who talked with President Roosevelt in the last week convinced him of the fallacy of his New York argument and converted him to a new economic philosophy—but that is not so, because the President previous to the New York address had expressed opinions about the housing problem similar to those he pronounced yesterday.

The real explanation seems to be that the President's objectives sometimes become blurred. From the beginning he has reserved to himself the right to be a football quarterback and change his course whenever he desired—going in one direction one day and the other way the next. But it is very confusing to one trying to determine exactly where the New Deal wishes to go.

He was the second of the 12 Hauptmann jurors to die. Liscom Case, of Lansdown, having succumbed to a heart ailment in February.

His widow, four children and two brothers survive.

Grady Confirms Trade Resignation

Henry F. Grady, chief of the State Department's Division of Trade Agreements, yesterday confirmed his resignation.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull announced that he had accepted the resignation "with much reluctance."

Grady, 54, who will leave August 1 to resume his former post as dean of the college of commerce at the University of California, in Berkeley, is known as having had more to do with effectuating the reciprocal trade agreement with Canada than any other person.

Harry C. Hawkins, of Lansing, Mich., now assistant chief of the division, will succeed Grady, it was announced. Hawkins, 42, is a veteran of the State Department, with overseas Army service and various university professorial chairs in his background. He was a technical adviser at the London world economic conference.

Budget Balance Indispensable, Eccles Asserts

Reserve Chairman Predicts Achievement 'Within Reasonable Time.'

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 8.—Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, tonight asserted a balanced budget is "absolutely indispensable," and predicted such an achievement "within a reasonable period."

He based his prediction, made before the seventh annual Wharton Institute of the University of Pennsylvania, on what he called the rising trend of Govenment revenues. He observed this income had risen from $1,880,000,000 in the calendar year 1932 to $3,857,000,000 in 1935, and asserted:

"With bonus payments met and a revision in taxes enacted, this favorable trend should be accelerated so that we would have every reason to expect a balanced budget within a reasonable period."

Eccles held the budget should be balanced through higher taxes or decreased expenditures, or both, when private industry is able to carry on without Government aid.

Indispensable Element.

In this connection, he said:

"Balancing the budget through increasing taxes or decreasing expenditures, or both, as the national income is restored, is an absolutely indispensable element in the eventual and complete success of a program of recovery requiring government intervention which entails large deficit financing."

Long noted as an advocate of heavy spending in times of depression, and the levying of heavy taxes in times of prosperity, Eccles asserted again that in times of depression it was necessary for the government to spend huge sums to increase consumer buying power, and thus absorb the excess capacity of industry.

Eccles said Federal spending for emergency purposes should not be slackened faster than private industry is able profitably to take over the load.

"To do so," he warned, "would reduce consumer buying power and thus retard, if not reverse, the progress of recovery."

Turning to his favorite theory—the velocity of money—Eccles said the flow of money must be maintained and increased in an expanding economy.

Government Must Act.

"If private capital fails to maintain and expand the flow, and widespread unemployment exists or develops, Government must act as a compensatory factor," he said.

"Purchasing power can only be maintained by private business as a whole disbursing its income, or insofar as it fails to do so, by Government expenditure either on the basis of deficit financing, or by taxing in such a way as to insure the flow of funds that individuals and corporations otherwise would accumulate and maintain in idle balances, so that socially beneficial work will be provided for those who are able and willing to work but for whom private enterprise fails to provide."

Eccles said the objective should be the maintenance of long-term prosperity and the avoidance of the "twin evils" of inflation and deflation. This could be attained, he said, through the effective co-ordination of monetary and fiscal policies, coupled with an enlightened body of public opinion.

Warns Against Propaganda.

Dean Joseph H. Willits of the Wharton School of Finance, another speaker at the dinner, warned against the pressure being exerted by minority groups to influence public opinion through propaganda.

As a result of the complexity of present-day society, Dr. Willits said, "pressure groups of various kinds and representing every shade of social opinion, become more potent in determining policy than are the facts disinterestedly stated."

"Propaganda—the systematic purveying of half-truths—attains an influence upon which the demagogue rides to his ends," he continued. "As a result, our sacred freedoms—freedom of inquiry, of opinion, of press and of speech—freedoms upon which most of our intellectual advance since the Middle Ages has been based—are being challenged."

At the institute's luncheon today two University of Pennsylvania economists, Dr. Ernest Minor Patterson and Dr. F. Cyril James, voiced warnings that uncontrolled inflation might result from current Government expenditures. Both urged immediate reductions.

The same permission was granted the Henry Franklin Hospital Corporation, trading as Grace Hospital, in respect to other hospitals.

Commisisoners Seek To End Hotel Tip Tax

Hotel owners of the District were told yesterday that the Commissioners would support legislation exempting them from payment of the unemployment compensation tax on waiters' tips. The Commissioners suggested the hotel association draft legislation exempting the gratuities from the base on which the hotels pay the tax at present.

At present the hotels pay tax on tips of waiters as well as on the wages paid them. The Employes Compensation Commission some time ago fixed a basis for determining compensation which included gratuities. The same thing was incorporated in the unemployment compensation law and regulations.

Glass Is Unopposed; Expresses Gratitude

Senator Carter Glass said yesterday he was "deeply grateful" to Democrats of Virginia for his automatic nomination to succeed himself in the Senate, according to the Associated Press.

He was informed today no one had filed notice of candidacy to oppose him in the August Democratic primary before the deadline Wednesday night.

The Senator also will have no Republican opposition in the November election, the Republican State convention having failed to nominate a candidate for the Senate.

Pilot Is Blamed In Airliner Crash

"Poor judgment on the part of the pilot," was blamed for the crash of a giant airliner last fall at Troy, N. Y., in which Ruth Nichols, one of America's ace airwomen, was badly injured in a statement issued yesterday by Eugene L. Vidal, director of the Bureau of Air Commerce.

The pilot, whose "poor judgment in the handling of the airplane following engine failure," was described by Vidal as the "probable cause of this accident," is the late Capt. Harry Hublitch, who died of injuries received in the crash. Four others in the plane escaped with minor injuries.

The Air Commerce Bureau's description of the accident stated in part:

"There was no structural or mechanical failure of the aircraft or controls. It is evident, however, that the airplane could not maintain its altitude after the left engine failed. Turning toward the disabled engine for the return flight necessitated considerably more loss of altitude than would a turn in the direction of the functioning engine."

Hoover Attack On Postal Aids Stirs Officials

Failure to Help in Seizure of Gangmen May Bring Congress Inquiry.

Widespread political repercussions threatened yesterday in the wake of the Department of Justice's dramatic — though bloodless — capture in the last week of Alvin Karpis, Harry Campbell and William Mahan, the Nation's three outstanding public enemies.

The revelation that J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, had criticized postal inspectors for failing to cooperate with his agents in their raid on Campbell's apartment in Toledo, Ohio, Thursday morning, stirred postal officials and raised the possibility of a Congressional investigation of the case.

At Toledo, the Associated Press reported, Police Chief Ray Allen ordered an investigation of the police department there to determine whether any members of the force knew Campbell under his alias of "Bob Miller." The bandit had been living for six months in the apartment where Government agents, led by Hoover, seized him without a struggle, and had lived in and about the Toledo-Cleveland area for 18 months.

Admits Knowing Gangster.

Lucas County Sheriff James O'Reilly, who admitted knowing the notorious gangster as "Bob Miller," insisted yesterday that it was a common interest in a certain breed of dog that led to their acquaintance.

While Justice agents were grilling Campbell in St. Paul, Minn., another group of agents in Tacoma, Wash., completed plans for arraigning William Mahan, who was seized Thursday noon in a San Francisco (Calif.) parking lot, on charges of kidnaping and mail extortion in connection with the $200,000 abduction of 9-year-old George Weyerhaeuser, son of a prominent Northwestern lumberman.

United States Attorney J. Charles Dennis declared last night that Mahan would be brought into court at 10 a. m. today. Should Mahan, who has steadfastly refused to confess, plead not guilty, Mr. and Mrs. Harmon Waley, who are serving prison sentences for the kidnaping, may be returned to testify against him.

Dennis indicated, however, that little George Weyerhaeuser would be the principal State witness.

A drive by the Department of Justice to arrest persons who aided in hiding Campbell was forecast in the questioning to which the gangster was subjected yesterday at St. Paul.

Flown to St. Paul.

Campbell was flown to St. Paul to stand trial along with his bandit chief, Karpis, on indictments in the kidnaping two years ago in January of Edward G. Bremer, president of the Commercial Bank of St. Paul.

Unlike Campbell, Mahan was not questioned yesterday in the jail at Tacoma. The kidnaper who enjoyed the unenviable title of "Public Enemy No. 1" for exactly six days, was shut off from conversation even from his guards.

On Mahan when he was arrested was found $7,300 and in a zipper bag in his automobile an additional $13,000, a good part of which, Hoover said, was ransom money. In the bag also were found dies and inks used to alter serial numbers of the ransom bills.

The investigation of the Toledo police department was believed ordered by Chief Allen because of Hoover's statement that the capture of some of the Barker-Karpis gang two years ago at Cleveland had been frustrated because "they were tipped off by two Cleveland politicians."

Hoover made a similar charge last Saturday when he took Karpis to St. Paul from New Orleans by plane.

Told of reports that the Justice Department was contemplating action against at least one Toledo public official for aiding Campbell, Sheriff O'Reilly said, "The next move is up to the Federal Government. I will not resign."

Mrs. Gertrude Campbell, the 20-year-old wife of the gunman, who was taken to Cleveland after Campbell's arrest for questioning, was reported released yesterday by the Associated Press.

Reveals Marriage to Karpis.

Hot Springs, Ark., May 8 (AP).—Mrs. Grace Goldstein, 30-year-old quiet-spoken blonde, said here tonight that she and Alvin Karpis, former public enemy No. 1, were married in New York City last September 25.

Sutton Guilty

veteran of hundreds of legal battles in Maryland's courts for almost 40 years, called Cleary and Jenkins "uncorroborated witnesses" and "accomplices who came over to the side of the law to save their necks."

Roman reviewed the testimony of each witness and when he came to the Philadelphia gunman and the "small shot racketeer" from Baltimore, said:

"It is the law, as we see it, that their statements are without corroboration. Witnesses have come here and told of the crime—and there is no doubt that it is dastardly and that this young man Wilson is dead.

"But we cannot take the word of such men. They are admitted thieves and therefore they are liars.

"There is not any evidence in this case that Albert Sutton plotted to kill McDonald."

"For this man, whether he was present at the scene of the crime or not, is even more guilty, if this is possible, than the men who did the shooting.

"He made his living by preying on honest people who work for their existence.

"The testimonies of William Cleary and Dewey Jenkins are corroborated completely, and this should be enough to conince you to deal death to a cold-blooded killer who showed no mercy.

When Roman came to the testimony of McDonald, he stressed what the defense considers one of its strongest points in its effort to save Sutton.

For McDonald, although a State's witness, came to the stand today and said he could see no reason why Sutton would want to plot to kill him, and that the month before Wilson was slain the prisoner had come to him and warned him Claude Bailey wanted to "bump him off."

"This is in evidence," Roman shouted. McDonald, witness for the State, came here, and what did he say? Would it be the act of one old friend trying to kill another to warn him Bailey was out to get him?"

Roman also pointed out that Cleary today had admitted the first one who told him of the plot to slay McDonald was Bailey, who was killed last autumn as he attempted to escape from Lorton Reformatory.

agency?—A. Yes—at infrequent periods.

Q. Did Parker, jr., ever discuss his activities with you?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you consider yourself entirely without responsibility for Parker's activities—A. No.

Q. Who was responsible for drawing Parker into the already confused picture?—A. The attorney general, who directed Col. Schwarzkopf, of the State police, to locate and take Wendel into custody.

Q. Have you personally asked your friend, Ellis Parker, sr., Burlington County detective, to aid in the search for his son?—A. No, and I do not intend to. It is my understanding that the warrant is in the possession of State police.

Q. If Parker, jr., is apprehended in New Jersey do you intend promptly to sign extradition papers so that he may be turned over to Kings County authorities? A—No. I will meet that situation when it is presented.

Q. How do you explain how a man who confessed a crime was held in the New Lisbon Colony for the Feeble-minded without legal commitment?—A. Such a thing never happened. Wendel voluntarily submitted a written request for the use of accommodations during the period when County Detective Parker was making an effort to substantiate the truth or falsity of the confession.

Q. How is it possible for a county detective to obtain shelter for a criminal at a non-penal State institution without a word of such proceedings being recorded with the duly appointed law enforcement agencies?—A. Detective Parker is a duly appointed law enforcement official.

Q. When, exactly did you first learn that Wendel had retracted his "confession."—A. The morning after Wendel's arrest, when I learned through the public press that the attorney general, Col. Schwarzkopf, Prosecutor Hauck, Capt. Lamb, of the State police, and others, had visited the Mercer County Jail in order to obtain such a confession.

Hoffman concluded his speech by saying:

"I have never heard an official or a public protest over the brutal beating given to Hauptmann in the Greenwich Village police station and substantiated by a report of a physical examination made by Dr. Thurston H. Dexter, who states: 'I conclude from this examination that Hauptmann has been subjected to a severe beating, all or mostly with blunt instruments, the injuries from which are general and include the head, back, chest abdomen and thighs.'"

Curley Blames Jobs List Theft On Republicans

Governor Begins Keeping Gun in Desk After Receipt of 'Bomb.'

By the Associated Press.

Boston, May 8.—Reports concerning bombs, firearms and looting in the office of Gov. James M. Curley during the last week developed the following facts tonight:

Arms—Since receiving what he called a "bomb" early this week, Curley announced today he has kept a .45-caliber revolver in his Statehouse desk. He does not carry a gun on his person, he added, but does keep one in his limousine.

Looting—State police were investigating reports that lists of constituents for whom legislators sought jobs were taken from the unlocked desk of a Curley stenographer. The Governor ordered locks installed at once on every desk in the executive offices, and then suggested to reporters only Republicans would be interested in material that might be taken from his office. Curley is a Democrat.

Two Packages Mailed.

Bombs — Two packages were mailed Curley this week. One the Governor opened in his office, saw batteries and a clock, and doused all in running water. State police said if the package contained an explosive it could have blown up the Governor's office. But State Chemist Joseph Walker later reported he could find no trace of any explosive.

The second package postal officials opened before it reached Curley's office. They found an alarm clock, not working; peppermint candy, and the scribbled words: "Your time has come, you brave man." A Harvard student, Leonard Farmer, 19, of Amherst, Mass., confessed sending the package as a joke, State Police Capt. John F. Stokes reported.

The missing lists of jobless, Curley's employment secretary, Frank Kane, said, contained approximately 100 names submitted by both Republican and Democratic members of the Legislature.

The Governor told reporters these lists were taken the day before a Rpublican Representative introduced in the House an order calling for a complete investigation of the Governor's employment office. The Representative charged favoritism in handing out jobs, during current debate over Curley's budget, largest in State history.

Accuses Republicans.

When a reporter asked who would want such lists, Curley replied:

"There is only one person, someone in the Republican Party. They might find some little thing they could use as political capital, and from the character of filth the so-called leaders of the Republican Party have been putting out since September, 1934 (Curley was elected that fall), I wouldn't put it beyond them to go to any depths."

It was while speaking thus that Curley opened the desk drawer, where reporters spotted the revolver.

Reaguer Given Life Sentence In Girl's Death

William H. Reaguer, 57, Culpeper, Va., undertaker, yesterday was ordered sentenced to life imprisonment as a result of his conviction on a charge of murdering Willie Mae Wood, a 21-year-old bride, in a room at the Houston Hotel last October.

Reaguer appeared elated that he had escaped the electric chair for the penknife slaying of the girl with whom he had admittedly been friendly for several years. At the time he almost decapitated her in the hotel, she had been married only a few days and had in the meantime, written him several letters couched in endearing terms.

"This was a terrible thing," Justice Oscar R. Luhring, in the District Supreme Court declared yesterday just before giving Reaguer the maximum sentence for second degree murder. "When the jury failed to find him guilty of first degree murder, he was given all the consideration to which he was entitled." The minimum sentence would have been 20 years. He will be sent to Lorton to serve his term.

The sentence was the maximum under the law for second-degree murder, which provides for imprisonment from 20 years to life.

2 Pittsburgh Buildings Sold by City for Taxes

Pittsburgh, May 8 (AP).—Two downtown buildings, one a three-story structure, the other two stories high, went on the auction block today for $79.15 each.

They were sold on orders of Mayor William N. McNair for delinquent taxes. The taxes due were $14,194.76 on the three-story building and $5,727.80 on the smaller building, used as a dwelling.

The City of Pittsburgh submitted the only bids.

McNair did not attend the sales. He said: "I never go to tax sales. They're too dull."

Seized on Farm, He Admits Crimes; Victims Were 7 and 12 Years Old.

By the Associated Press.

Portland, Me., May 8.—Sheriff Henry E. Burnell said tonight that James H. Folsom, 35, of Skowhegan, paroled State reformatory inmate, had confessed to the slayings of both Mary Proulx, 7, at Waterville Sunday and Annie K. Knights, 12, at Fairfield, last October.

Sought by police throughout the State and by National Guardsmen in Lewiston, Folsom was arrested at a West Cumberland farm, 12 miles from Portland, where he had been working two days.

He was rushed to the sheriff's office here, where in the almost deserted county court building, Burnell said, he wrote out his confession in longhand.

The circumstances of the Proulx and Knights slayings were almost identical. In each instance the child was gagged with her own clothing, her hands were tied and she was criminally assaulted. Both were strangled to death.

The confession, which Burnell said Folsom wrote, was:

"I, James H. Folsom, admit I am guilty of killing girl in Waterville, Me., on Sunday 3d of May, also Annie Knight of Fairfield. Both were the same. They started to cry and I was afraid someone would hear so I tied their hands and gagged them both. I did not know either one was not of this world until afterward. I did not seem to have any feeling of fear afterward, but I did wish I had not done this thing.

"My worry is not for myself now, but it is for my mother. I have no right to speak of her in this.

"I attacked both girls. I seemed not to know or care what I was doing. I lost my head, I guess.

"I am writing this under fear of what might happen if I do not and also signing it under protest because I am afraid. I hope and pray that God will forgive me . . ."

Investigating officers rushed to Portland from Waterville and Lewiston and after a hurried conference, Folsom was taken by automobile to the attorney general's office in the Statehouse at Augusta.

BritishDemand Hitler Treaties Include Soviet

White Paper Gives Queries Asked of Berlin on Peace Program.

By the Associated Press.

London, May 8.—Great Britain has put up to Adolf Hitler the next move in negotiations for peace in Europe.

A questionnaire submitted to Berlin by the British government and made public today has as a major point the stand that Germany should include Soviet Russia, Latvia and Estonia in her proposed nonaggression pacts. These pacts would substitute for the Locarno treaty, denounced by the Reich.

A barrage of questions was laid down in the questionnaire for Germany to clarify before Britain considers that negotiations for treaties can open, a government white paper disclosed.

Chief questions asked Germany included:

1. Whether Germany regards herself now in a position to conclude "genuine treaties?"

2. Whether the point has been reached where Germany can signify that she recognizes and intends to respect the existing territorial and political status of Europe? In other words, said authoritative sources, has Germany's craving for equality been satisfied?

3. Whether Germany's proposals for non-aggression pacts can cover at least Russia, Latvia and Estonia, in addition to Germany's immediate neighbors?

4. Whether the proposed nonaggression pacts between Germany and others state that her southeastern and northeastern frontiers may be guaranteed by mutual assistance arrangements?

5. Whether Germany is still prepared to agree to an international arrangement to prevent non-interference in the affairs of other states?

(A Paris dispatch said French officials found little satisfaction in Britain's questionnaire. Unofficial sources called it "vague.")

Authoritative sources expected it may be some time before a reply from Germany will be received and indicated the League Council, meeting next Monday, probably will temporarily shelve the Locarno problem.

There was no mention in the British questionnaire of arrangements in the remilitarized Rhineland zone but the document added: "There are other matters which will have to be raised at a later date."

The government said, "a decision not to attempt to accompany a western air pact by a regional agreement for limitation of air strength would be very much regretted by his majesty's government."

Explosion of Meteor Shakes Oregon Homes

Roseburg, Oreg., May 8 (AP).—Explosion of a meteor which flashed through the sky early today shook buildings here and awakened many residents.

W. F. Folmer, 74, Dead; Was Noted Inventor

Rochester, N. Y., May 8 (AP).—William Frederick Folmer, 74, noted inventor and former president of the Folmer-Graflex Corporation, a division of the Eastman Kodak Co., died today of a heart attack.

He was born in Kentucky and was a graduate of the University of Kentucky. He invented the Graflex camera and other photographic instruments.

He is survied by his wife, Eleanor; three daughters and a son.

Point to Reserves.

Although monetary experts pointed out that the heavy French gold reserves will help fight off international speculative attacks on the franc, today's struggle between the leading political parties in Paris with franc stability at issue might, it was said, touch off unrest among the French people themselves.

International bankers focused attention on the statement of Premier Sarraut that Frenchmen "hold their fate in their own hands."

This, they said, is the nub of the situation. As most see it, should today's flight from francs into dollars and the pound sterling excite the French people to heavy gold hoarding, the long struggle of France to stay on gold would move to a swift conclusion.

A rush on the part of the French people to get gold in place of francs, they said, would be the straw which might break the camel's back.

The fact that the Bank of France did not take any action to stem the tide of outflowing gold was seen by international bankers as indicating that, on the surface at least, the French authorities were making a valiant effort to adhere to orthodox practice.

Children Who Found Pistol

Children Find Loaded Revolver In Car; Fun Is Halted by Police

When Myrtle Cortviendt, 6, and her brother, Leslie Cortviendt, 4, yesterday found a loaded revolver in an automobile parked in front of their home at 1302 L street northwest, they decided to see how it worked.

Police say it does work, and they are looking for the owner who will be required to explain why he left the weapon in his unlocked automobile. But the children were only interested in how it was put together, and after the manner of children, they started to take it apart.

A passerby notice them with the gun and called police. When they arrived, two cartridges had been taken from the gun, and both the children were gleeful over their mechanical success. The gun was taken to headquarters.

Leslie's and Myrtle's parents could not be located, but it is believed they were at work at the time. The children grinningly posed for a Post photographer, sans gun, and in return for an ice cream cone, promised they wouldn't play with any more "real shootin' gun," loaded or unloaded.

Oblivious to the potential death they tossed from one to another, the children were having the time of their lives with the pistol when a police radio car rushed to the scene and disarmed them.

They said they did not know which gave them the bigger thrill, playing with the gun or watching the policemen leap out of their car to bring their play to an end.

Eastern Roads Move to Meet Truck Threat

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 8.—Eastern railroads moved today to meet truck competition by offering a free pick-up and delivery of less than carload traffic without any distance limitations.

Announcement of the proposal to inaugurate the new service was made following upon a meeting of operating officials of the leading Eastern carriers.

It wil be started May 25, the announcement said, if the Interstate Commerce Commission will waive its usual requirement that new rate schedule be filed 30 days in advance of taking effect.

Permission for the establishment of such service was granted by the I. C. C. a few days ago.

J. L. Keeshin, president of the Keeshin Transcontinental Freight Lines, Inc., announced today a new plan for co-ordination of rail-truck service in the East and Midwest.

Co-operating with the Keeshin lines are the Baltimore & Ohio, the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific, the Great Western, the Central Railroad of New Jersey, the Reading Co. and the Alton Railroad at all points served by the companies.

Keeshin said: "This service will be put into operation under provisions of the motor carrier act of 1935, which permits railroads and motor-truck lines to file joint schedules of rates, and those railroads will participate in these schedules.

"Under the new service, motor trucks of the Keeshin companies will be loaded on flat cars * * * carried over the rails instead of the highways to their destination."

It was said that the B. & O. is building terminals for Keeshin in New York and Chicago, the Chicago terminal the largest of its kind in the world.

Keeshin predicted that within a year all railroads of the country will follow the plan of co-ordinated rail-truck service.

U. S. Transit Traffic Increases 2,000,000

Cadman Lauds Cathedral Plan In Speech Here

Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, of New York City, was the guest speaker at the annual meeting of National Cathedral Association yesterday afternoon. Dr. Cadman pleaded for church unity, praised the cathedral undertaking and expressed appreciation of his recent election to the cathedral council.

Other speakers included former Undersecretary of State William Castle, president of the National Cathedral Association; Mrs. William Adams Brown, national chairman of the National Woman's Committee of Washington Cathedral, and Edwin N. Lewis, executive secretary of the cathedral.

Reports were heard from a number of chairmen of national groups, including Mrs. Frederic W. Rhinelander, daughter of the late Right Rev. Henry Yates Satterlee, first Bishop of Washington, chairman of the association in New York City.

After Evensong in the Great Choir of Washington Cathedral, members of the association attended a reception and tea in the Bishop's garden, at which Bishop Freeman was host.

Graziani Takes Harar, Pushes Toward Capital

Vast Stores Are Captured; Rome Expects Amnesty to Political Prisoners.

By the United Press.

Rome, May 8.—Italian troops seized control of southeastern Ethiopia today with occupation of the key city of Harar, second largest of the fallen empire and birthplace of the fugitive Emperor Haile Selassie.

Simultaneously, Fascist legions, which had been encamped in the southern lakes region for several months, started a rapid advance north toward Addis Ababa, planting the Italian tri-color in some of the richest terrain of all Ethiopia.

Harar was occupied late yesterday by Gen. Rodolfo Graziani's "hell on wheels" column.

The Italians put down rioting which had broken out among the natives and reportedly lifted a siege at the British consulate, where foreigners took refuge when frenzied Ethiopians stormed through the city shooting, burning and pillaging.

Delayed by Rains.

The advance from Jijiga, which was occupied Tuesday, required 48 hours, due to torrential rains.

Inhabitants of Harar, including foreigners, joyously welcomed the blackshirt soldiers. Notables and clergymen submitted to the Italian high command immediately.

Large groups of armed Ethiopians, formerly soldiers in the army of Dedjazmatch Nasibu, surrendered to the Italians on the road from Jijiga to Harar, and many accompanied the victorious Fascists to the "Emperor's home."

Stored War Supplies.

Dedjazmatch Nasibu, probably the best general of all the Ethiopian commanders, stored away great quantities of war material at Harar and Jijiga many months before the Italians threatened either position.

Operating from those bases, he held the Italian Somaliland forces at bay for nearly seven months.

Italian Amnesty Expected.

Rome, May 8 (AP).—Reliable sources reported tonight a general amnesty will be declared tomorrow for Italians imprisoned for civil or political crimes.

The amnesty order, these sources said, will be in observance of the Fascist victory in Ethiopia.

Diplomats looked ahead to the sessions tomorrow night of the Fascist grand council and the Italian cabinet at which Ethiopia's annexation to King Victor Emmanuel's kingdom will be proclaimed.

Self-Rebuilding Universe Seen In Creation of Heavy Atoms

Chicagoan's Experiments Upset Old Theories; Destruction of Particles Held Merely Birth of New and More Massive Ones.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 8.—Creation of heavy atoms by destruction of light ones was announced today by a University of Chicago physical chemist and advanced as proof that the universe rebuilds itself as it disintegrates.

Upsetting all previous ideas of how atoms change their form, the discovery struck a compromise between scientists who believe the universe gradually crumbling to bits and those who think it constantly expanding.

Under the new concept, the universe might be compared to a clock which automatically rewound itself as it ran down.

The revolutionary theory of atom smashing came from the laboratory of Prof. William D. Harkins, whose distinction in physical chemistry won him the Andrew MacLeish distinguished service professorship at the University of Chicago.

Prof. Harkins began by contradicting the accepted theory that atoms can be shattered by bombarding them with other atoms at high speed.

What actually happended, he said he had learned by photographing the "tracks" of atoms in such collisions, was that the atom used as a projectile entered the bombarded atom, and the two formed a new atom of a different kind.

The terrific force with which this union occurred set up such a vibration in the new atom, he added, that another atom—different than either of the parents—was born and shot into space to make its own way. With its departure, the parent changed to still another element.

300 British Troops Sent to Palestine

Cairo, Egypt, May 8 (AP).—Authoritative sources said tonight two companies of infantry totaling 300 men were sent to Palestine as reinforcements for troops at Jerusalem and other cities.

The soldiers left in Royal Air Force planes. They are to be added to existing British police forces in the Holy Land to guard against further outbreaks between Jews and Arabs.

(An announcement in London said the reinforcements were sent after a request for additional troops had been received by Sir Arthur Grenfell Wauchope, high commissioner for Palestine.)

A detachment of tanks will be sent to Palestine tomorrow from Alexandria.

The Arab national council in Palestine yesterday voted to extend the existing general strike. The council also decided to refuse to pay taxes after May 15 unless the government complies with Arab demands, including stoppage of Jewish immigration and a ban on land sales.

The normal Palestine garrison of British troops consists of 1,970 men of all ranks, including two battalions of infantry totaling 1,766 men.

State Nears Completion Of Tampa Flogging Case

Bartow, Fla., May 8 (AP).—The State today neared completion of its case against seven former Tampa policemen in connection with the flogging, tarring and feathering of three unemployed labor organizers at Tampa last November.

State Attorney Rex Farrior formally advised defense counsel he expected to rest his case by noon Monday.

Youth, Widow Held in Slaying Of Her Spouse

Each Accuses the Other of Shooting 60-Year-Old Farmer.

By the Associated Press.

Elkader, La., May 8.—An 18-year-old youth and his 30-year-old sweetheart, after confessing they agreed to get her 60-year-old husband of a week out of the way of their love affair, each accused the other tonight, officers said, of firing the fatal shot.

Held for the shotgun slaying on Tuesday of Dan Shine, farmer, a bachelor up to a week ago, were Mrs. Pearl Hines Shine, his widow, and Maynard Lenox, of East Dubuque, Ill. Mrs. Shine was married twice before she wed Shine.

"Both admitted," Clayton County Sheriff L. J. Palas reported, "that they plotted to make a widow of the red-haired woman Dan married after she kept house for him three months, but each claims the other actually did it.

"The woman told us last night that Lenox said to her:

"I love you, Pearl, and I will get him out of the way so I can come and live with you."

"But the boy told us today Mrs. Shine fired the shot, that he only put Shine's body in a closet at his home and 'fixed it so it would look like he killed himself.'"

Discovery of Shine's body Wednesday evening slumped in a small closet at the farm home where he lived with his brother-partner, Tim Shine, 70, a bachelor, started the investigation. He had been shot to death while Tim visited a neighbor.

The dead man's right hand clasped the barrel of a shotgun. A piece of string attached to the gun trigger was twined in the fingers of his left hand. His head had been shattered by the charge.

"But it didn't look like he could have killed himself," the sheriff said.

Gold No Longer Is Legal Tender, Carr Declares; $111,246 Involved.

By the Associated Press.

Because of the gold reserve act of 1934, the United States has agreed to accept payments due from Panama July 1 in present American dollars instead of pre-revaluation gold coin worth some 60 per cent more.

Wilbur J. Carr, Assistant Secretary of State, said today that Panama on that date, in accordance with awards made by the Panama-American Claims Commission, will pay the United States $111,246 for distribution to 19 American claimants.

The payment will be made in present-day dollars, Carr explained, despite the fact that the claims conventions of 1926 and 1932 provide for payment in gold coin, because existing law makes it necessary for all transactions to be in legal tender and gold coin is no longer legal tender.

The State Department is merely the agent between the Panama government and the American claimants in the transaction, Carr said, and can only receive and pay the awards in American dollars.

If the United States insisted on payment in coin of weight and fineness legal at the time the conventions were signed, Carr said, it would receive more than necessary to satisfy the American awards and make an embarrassing profit from the transaction.

Panama, faced with a similar question arising from revaluation and conflicting treaty provisions, refused to accept checks for $250,000 at present dollar value and—under a new treaty—will hereafter receive payments of approximately $450,000 annually for Panama Canal rental instead of the $250,000 in gold coin specified in the old treaty.

Prospective Missionaries Will Wed

Leighton Roger Holley and Ada McElmurry, students at the Washington Missionary College, Takoma Park, will be married Monday night. Both will go to China as missionaries.

British Fleet Is Ready For Any Foe, Chief Says

Valetta, Malta, May 8 (AP).—Admiral of the Fleet Sir Roger Keyes declared last night that Great Britain's navy, "whatever the Italian command may think to the contrary, is still invincible and is ready and willing to tackle any force which dares to challenge it, whatever its armament."

The admiral made his statement at a dinner for 600 war veterans and their wives who are making a pilgrimage to Gallipolis and Salonika.

Sir Roger said the British navy still maintains the freedom of the seas and that Malta would remain Great Britain's naval base in the Mediterranean "in spite of any number of threats."

2 Missionaries To Wed; Plan Trip to China

Ceremony Set for Monday Night; Both Graduates of D. C. School.

Two students at the Washington Missionary College, Takoma Park, Md., will begin their careers with matrimony before sailing as missionaries to China.

They are Miss Ada McElmurry, 23, who graduated last week from the school of nursing of the Washington Sanitarium, and Leighton Roger Holley, 25, who will graduate Sunday night from the Washington Missionary College.

The couple will be married Monday night at the nurses' home. They will leave that night for Los Angeles to attend the annual general conference of the Seventh Day Adventists, which opens May 26. After their stay in California, they will sail June 22 on the steamship President Lincoln for Shanghai.

Miss McElmurry is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson C. McElmurry, of Hastings, Mich., and Mr. Holley is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Holley, of 1518 Whittier street northwest. The bride-elect is a graduate of Battle Creek Academy, class of 1930. She attended Emmnauel Missionary College, Berrien Springs, Mich., for one year. She also studied for a year in Los Angeles before coming to Takoma Park. Holley, who will be in charge of publishing work in China, received his education at Cedar Lake Academy, Cedar Lake, Mich., and at Takoma Park.

The Rev. Warren E. Barr, chaplain at the sanitarium, will perform the ceremony at 7:30 p. m. A reception for the bridal party and immediate families will be held at Holley's parents' home.

A. F. of L. Drive Set to Organize Steel Workers

By the Associated Press.

Taking direct issue with John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, the American Federation of Labor's executive council decided yesterday to start a steel organization campaign immediately.

William Green, federation president, said he would send organizers into the principal steel centers as soon as the council adjourned next week. These organizers, with headquarters at Pittsburgh and Gary, Ind., will attempt to bring the steel workers into the Amalgamated Association of Iron Steel and Tin Workers of North America and several craft unions.

Lewis, president of the United Mine workers and leader of the federation's industrial union forces, contends that all the steel workers should be placed in one big union. The Labor Department estimates the industry employs 314,600. He and his associates recently offered the Amalgamated $500,000 to start an industrial campaign under the direction of Lewis' committee for industrial organization.

Green said yesterday that the steel union would be given "broad jurisdiction," but that craft union rights must be respected.

Lewis' half million dollar offer is in the hands of the Amalgamated's convention in Canonsburg, Pa. Green said "We will cross that bridge when we come to it" when asked what he would do if the steel union accepted it.

While the council was framing the steel organization plar, John P. Frey, president of the A. F. of L. metal trades department and a craft union leader, assailed the committee for industrial organization Lewis set up to promote his cause.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office

By Morgan Baker.

Bids on the extension to the HOLC Building at Indiana avenue and First street northwest will be opened May 18, it was learned last night. Contracts are expected to be awarded immediately thereafter and construction begun with the building slated for occupancy next winter.

BAKER.

With the addition to the HOLC structure, formerly the Acacia Building, all four activities—the HOLC proper, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, Federal Savings and Loan Association and the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation—will be housed in one building. These offices are now divided in three buildings with the following floor space:

HOLC Building, 85,000 square feet; New Postoffice Department Building, 56,500 square feet, and the Standard Oil Building, 11,450 square feet.

The new extension will provide approximately 90,000 square feet.

Ever since creation of the HOLC, office space has been at a premium. With the new quarters at Indiana avenue and reduction in personnel of about 300 or 400 by next winter, the HOLC employes will enjoy normal office conditions.

While "some" reduction in personnel is being made in the Washington offices, HOLC officials emphasize the point that the bulk of the cut has been and will be in the field. On May 1 there were slightly more than 2,300 HOLC employes in Washington.

The officials declare that the work is diminishing and that they "will not keep a single employe on the pay roll to sit and look out the window." The personnel slash is expected to reach a peak here in June, as all loans cease June 12. The HOLC has closed as many as 40,000 loans in a week. As an example of the diminished work, the last week in April only 1,300 loans were cleared.

Mild expansion in the work of the FHLB is expected to absorb some of the dismissed personnel of HOLC.

The first consideration in cutting down the staff, the officials say, is efficiency. The second consideration involves a number of factors, including the invoking of Section 213 (marriage clause of the economy act), actual need of employment, etc.

A personnel committee investigates every case slated for dismissal along the foregoing lines. Frequently transfers within the organization are effected, or transfers to other agencies.

Harry Morris (F), Navy, has invented a method for shrinking bushings by using carbon dioxide. By his method, objectionable ice formations are avoided.

Two Employe Objectives.

"Increasing Government expenditures are placing Government employes at a considerable disadvantage, so far as the general public is concerned," it is declared by Claude Babcock, president of the American Federation of Government Employes. "It appears that one of the most vital items of our work at this time is the task of explaining to the public that Government employes do not profit from these emergency expenditures.

"As a matter of fact, it works out in quite the opposite direction. Congress is required to aid the farmers, the unemployed, and various other interests. This must be done, and it takes money. On the other hand, Congress does not want to place any heavier burden of taxes on the people than it can help, and the result is that it keeps a closer eye than ever on the expenses of the regular Government establishment. Within the last month committees have been appointed by Senate and House alike to consider governmental reorganization with a view to economy.

"I have forecast this economy program on several occasions," the employe leader continues. "It is inevitable that, unless new sources of revenue appear, the greater the amount of emergency expenditures, the less Congress will be disposed to make the budgets of the regular Government agencies. Already, in many of the older agencies, promotions are so rare as to be almost unheard of. Unless opportunity for advancement is offered, morale in the service will surely fall."

He points out two tasks before Government employes:

1. To make the American public understand that they do not profit from the emergency expenditures and are in no way responsible for them;

2. To try to improve conditions to such an extent that advancement may be offered diligent and efficient employes, for the good of the workers and the Government alike.

Four new units—one in the Federal group—were announced last night by the American Federation of Government Employes. The new lodges reported are: No. 302, veterans' facility employes, Lexington, Ky.; No. 1089, relief administration employes in Baltimore; No. 1090, Pittsburgh; and No. 1091, Duluth, Minn.

Four Retirements Announced.

Retirement of four employes, all with long service records, is announced at Patent Office. They are reported as follows:

John A. Bartholomew, principal examiner, Division 32. Mr. Bartholomew was born on February 9, 1866, and has been with Patent Office nearly 31 years.

Andrew R. Benson, principal examiner, Division 28. Mr. Benson, who was born February 3, 1866, served in the same division for 42 years until his retirement.

I. P. Disney, examiner of interference, entered the office in 1890.

George M. Copenhaver, assistant chief of Financial Division, has been in Government service 55 years, entering the Patent Office in 1881.

Miss Gertrude Louis (P), General Accounting Office, invites all Iowans in Government service to attend the Iowa State Society reception and dance at the Willard Hotel, Thursday night. Dr. John Studebaker, commissioner of education, Interior, will be guest of honor.

Question on Reinstatement.

Q. Prior to Government employment, I served in the capacity of junior clerk-typist (non-civil service), for the Federal referee in bankruptcy in my home State for more than four years. In case my present indefinite appointment under Civil Service is discontinued, can I apply the aforementioned bankruptcy service toward reinstatement, inasmuch as such employment was indirectly under Federal control?

K. L. W. (F).

A. According to the Civil Service Commission, if you will obtain an official record of your service with the Federal referee in bankruptcy and forward it to the commission, they will determine for you the creditability of such service.

Million Donors Of $1 Each Aim Of Democrats

'Roosevelt Nominators' to Rally Over Nation on Night of Acceptance.

By the Associated Press.

The Democratic National Committee hopes to swing into its post-convention Presidential campaign with more than $1,000,000 in the war chest.

This was disclosed by committee officials yesterday when they announced plans to enroll 1,000,000 Democrats as "Roosevelt Nominators"—at $1 each. Each is to get a certificate.

These "Nominators" are to gather at mass meetings, rallies, barbecues, picnics and smokers throughout the country the night of June 27 to hear the party's Presidential candidate accept the nomination at Franklyn Field, Philadelphia.

Chicago Field Engaged.

Soldier Field has been engaged for the Chicago rally. New York Democrats probably would gather at a baseball park, officials said. radio loudspeakers are to be installed at every rally. Boxing matches and musical programs are being arranged for some of them.

The committee owed $378,000 last December 31. This debt has been entirely wiped out from the $327,000 netted so far from the Jackson Day dinners and the sum Philadelphia put up for the convention. The committee expects to clear $150,000 from the convention program.

Wants Coalition Ticket.

Wilmington, Del., May 8 (AP).—Gov. C. Douglass Buck, Republican national committeeman from Delaware, today declared himself in favor of a coalition ticket for nomination at the Republican National Convention.

Gov. Buck's choice for the Presidential nomination was Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas, while for Vice President he hoped to see nominated by the Republicans "some able, sound, trustworthy, patriotic and sensible member of the Democratic Party, such as former Gov. Ely of Massachusetts, or Lewis Douglas."

The opinion was expressed in reply to a letter the Wilmington Journal-Every Evening sent to each of the State delegates to the Republican National Convention.

Borah Won't Be Delegate.

Boise, Idaho, May 8 (AP).—Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho, will not be among the eight Idaho delegates to the National Republican Convention, Ray McKaig, field agent for the Borah-for-President Organization, said today.

Idaho's convention delegates will be elected tomorrow at Moscow. State leaders previously had said Borah would be named if he desired.

McKaig arrived from Washington for a visit.

He predicted Borah will "score decisively" in the Ohio primary May 12 despite what he termed "the Ohio Republican machine's rabid antagonism," adding:

Knox Off for Northwest.

Chicago, May 8 (AP).—Col. Frank Knox planned to leave tonight for a swing into the Northwest which will include appearances in Portland, Oreg., and Seattle and Spokane, Wash.

Edward A. Hayes, chairman of the national Frank Knox for President Committee, said it was the last extensive tour the Illinois candidate will make before the Republican convention.

Hayes explained that the trip was in answer to repeated requests from West Coast Republican organizations, including the Oregon Republican Club. Knox will speak in Portland, under the club's auspices, May 11, moving to Seattle May 13 and Spokane May 14.

Mail Thefts

Sometimes the robbery would not be discovered for days."

Morrissey said the bonds were cashed at the Denver Bank bond department. He asserted he had evidence that Kennedy and the "underworld character" visited in Arnold's apartment.

"Arnold * * * contends that if any stolen bonds were handled by him it was without his knowledge or that of the bank," he said.

"We are charging him, however, with being a party to the conspiracy."

He filed charges of conspiracy to rob the United States mails and to dispose of the loot against all the prisoners.

Arnold, prominent socially, was named an assistant vice president of the bank in September, 1928.

Roberts played but little part in the case, Morrissey said.

"He acted as legal adviser to some of the men," he added.

Kennedy is accused here in connection with charges involving the theft of nearly $100,000 worth of bonds in Omaha, disposed of in Denver.

"Hot" Bond Suspects.

By the Associated Press.

The postoffice inspection service said that Oliver P. Arnold, of Denver, and 10 others arrested yesterday are suspected of dealing in "hot" bonds taken in mail robberies in "a large number of cases in Western States."

They will be charged with receiving and aiding in the disposition of bonds stolen from the mails at Jefferson, Iowa, and Clair City, Minn.

Foreign Affairs Topic of Lewis At Law Session

Journalist Chides Legalists; Pepper Draws Laugh With Story About Coolidge.

Treaties must be brought "in harmony" with the evolving material they concern, Sir Willmott Lewis, Washington newspaper correspondent, last night told the American Law Institute.

The day has passed, he said, when tyrants can sit around biege tables and chip maps into little pieces as they parcel out a continent.

"I wonder," he added, "if the world is not in need of a restatement of the realities of international relationships."

Twits the Lawyers.

He drew an analogy with the program of the organization to perfect a restatement of the law.

"The law," he declared, "grows more whimsical with every code that is compiled."

Laughter rang through the banquet tables when he said:

"Law is a digestive process punctuated by rather violent decisions."

Sir Willmott, former Senator George Wharton Pepper, of Pennsylvania, and Judge Learned Hand, of New York, vied with each other in telling anecdotes. The biggest laugh came when Pepper told a new story about former President Calvin Coolidge.

Wrong Vice President.

"Mr. Coolidge," he related, "was Vice President when a fire broke out in his Washington hotel. "After the firemen brought the flames under control the Vice President started to climb the stairway to the second floor. He was stopped by a fire marshal, who said:

"'You can't go up there. Who are you, anyhow?'

"'I'm the Vice President,' Coolidge answered.

"'All right, go ahead.'

"But before Mr. Coolidge got more than two or three steps up the flight, the fire marshal stopped him again.

"'Vice President of the United States.'

"'Well, you'll have to come back. I thought you were vice president of the hotel.'"

Heart Stroke Kills Pessimist-Author

Munich, Germany, May 8 (AP).—Dr. Oswald Spengler, whose pessimistic prediction of the collapse of western civilization gained world-wide recognition for his book, "The Decline of the West," was found dead in bed at his home today.

After teaching high school in Hamburg, Spengler came to Munich in 1910 and devoted himself to his private studies. He wrote his well known "Untergang des Abendlandes" (Decline of the West) in 1914, but held the work from publication until four years later.

One of Spengler's favorite theories was that familiarity of non-European races with technical knowledge was a crime against the white race and would inevitably accelerate its downfall. He also was strongly apprehensive of the dangers of bolshevism.

Mrs. Lacy Dies; Rites Tomorrow

Sara R. Lacy, 78, widow of Benjamin W. Lacy, former justice of Virginia's Supreme Court, died here yesterday at 1840 Kenyon street northwest, after a lingering illness.

A resident of Washington for five years, Mrs. Lacy was a native of Virginia. Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon from St. Peter's Church, near Tunstall, Va. Burial arrangements have not been announced.

Mrs. Lacy is survived by two sons, Ben W. Lacy, of Montgomery, Ala., and Arthur W. Lacy, of Washington, and Mrs. J. J. Van Aker, of Richmond. Five grandchildren also survive.

William Ingersoll, 75, Stage Actor, Expires

Los Angeles, May 8 (AP).—William Ingersoll, 75, veteran stage actor, died yesterday.

Ingersoll was a native of La Fayette, Ind., and his long career in the theater included appearances with Mrs. Fiske, Ethel Barrymore, Dewolfe Hopper and Nat Goodwin. His last engagement was with Bert Lytell in "The First Legion."

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mab Ingersoll, and a daughter, Mrs. Isa Minnick, of Chattanooga, Tenn.

Zeppelin to Land at Dawn

After greeting New York City, the Hindenburg will proceed here, where a ground crew of 300 sailors and soldiers is ready to seize her landing ropes and drag her to earth. If the landing is made by 5:30 a. m. the ship will have come from Germany in 62 hours.

The Hindenburg's radio reported all was well aboard and that a record passage was in sight. The airship weathered a severe rainstorm over the North Atlantic last night with such ease that her passengers hardly knew there was a disturbance. Then she rose above the storm and this morning sailed into brilliant sunshine.

Dr. Hugo Eckener, president of the Zeppelin Co., revealed that the Hindenburg's officers turned the rainstorm to good account. Five tons of water were caught by the fabric of the ship and drained into her ballast tanks.

Water Most Welcome.

"The water was most welcome," said Dr. Eckener. "It compensated the loss in weight through fuel consumption."

"The Hindenburg is running like mad," Capt. Ernest Lehmann, her commander, messaged. "It is averaging more than 80 miles an hour, with the possibility of reaching New York early Saturday."

Special precautions were being taken here to handle the airship safely. It was recalled that the U. S. S. Akron, which plunged into the sea off the Jersey coast in 1933 with the loss of 73 lives, had two accidents at Lakehurst when crosswinds bounced her against the ground and threw the ship against the hangar. Six months later, at San Diego, two members of the Akron's ground crew were killed when they were carried into the air clinging to ropes, and could not hold on.

"There will be no chances taken in handling the Hindenburg," Commander Charles E. Rosendahl, of the United States Navy, said.

Passengers Make Merry.

Aboard the Hindenburg en Route to the United States, May 8 (U.P.).—Capt. Ernest Lehmann predicted tonight that the Hindenburg would make a record passage of about 61½ hours across the Atlantic from Friedrichshafen.

He expected to reach Lakehurst between 5 and 6 a. m. tomorrow.

Music and champagne flowed in the bar tonight as the wireless was clogged with messages of greeting from the United States. The lady passengers put on evening gowns for a farewell celebration.

The Hindenburg is sliding through calm weather. There is a light rain. Officers predicted the average speed for the trip would be around 70 knots.

May Visit Washington.

Whether the Hindenburg will be seen today by Washingtonians depends on how close to sunrise the giant airship completes its transatlantic voyage.

If the Hindenberg reaches New Jersey before dawn it is planned, according to communications received here in the Navy Department, to place the ship in the hangar immediately.

However, if the sun has already risen by the time the ship has arrived the original plans of having the airship fly over Washington and nearby cities will be followed.

The zeppelin commanders, it was explained, wish to avoid the heat of the day in landing the ship as less hydrogen has to be released when the air is cool.

Tomorrow morning two Navy transport planes will take a host of Government officials on an inspection tour of the zeppelin. Among those going will be Admiral Standley, Acting Secretary of Navy; Rear Admiral Ernest King, chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics; Assistant Secretary of State R. Walton Moore, Richard Southgate, of the State Department; Eugene Vidal, from the Bureau of Air Commerce; Frederic A. Delano, from the Smithsonian Institution, and Gen. Oscar Westover, chief of the Army Air Service.

E. B. Vreeland, Representative 14 Years, Dies

By the Associated Press.

Salamanca, N. Y., May 8.—Edward B. Vreeland, 78, a national figure a quarter of a century ago when he championed currency reform measures while in Congress, died at his home here today.

The Aldrich-Vreeland emergency currency act which followed the panic of 1907 has been called one of the foundations of the Federal Reserve system by some financial authorities. It expanded the currency base. Vreeland served in Congress for 14 years.

He was president of the Salamanca Trust Co. for 44 years until his resignation January 1 because of ill health.

He was born in Cuba, N. Y., in 1857, became superintendent of schools here in 1877 at the age of 20, studied law, then entered banking. At 34 he was president of the local bank.

Vreeland was chairman of the House Banking and Currency Committee when he became nationally prominent for his advocacy of a broader currency base. He proposed that commercial paper and collateral as well as United States bonds be used as a base.

A $500,000,000 emergency fund set up by the Aldrich-Vreeland act became useful in the early days of the World War, halting demands made on some banks for deposits.

By the United Press.

Haifa, Palestine, May 8.—The tragic King of Kings, Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia, accompanied by his queen, members of the royal family and a few faithful followers, went into exile in the Holy Land tonight.

Emperor Selassie arrived without fanfare on the British cruiser Enterprise and proceeded immediately to Jeusalem.

The Negus and his party filed down the gangway solemnly, quietly. He was not accorded the usual salute given kings and emperors.

His face was lined with grief, but he held his head high as he walked 100 yards from the dock to a special motor railway car. The Empress Menen, heavily veiled and with head bowed, walked beside him. A large crowd lined the passage to the railway car. All were silent.

Acting District Commissioner P. Gordon and other members of the government were at the dock to meet the royal party. No words were spoken. They merely nodded in recognition.

A heavy guard around the emperor prevented journalists, several of whom flew from Europe, from attempting to interview his majesty.

Dock workers broke numerous bottles of the Emperor's royal wine while unloading his 10 tons of baggage.

The United Press correspondent counted 117 chests, presumably containing the Emperor's gold, and other valuable possessions. They were unloaded under heavy guard.

An officer of the Enterprise revealed that the Negus brought a huge python along as a pet.

The Emperor and his party arrived at Jerusalem at 4:40 p. m. and went immediately to the King David Hotel.

He was received at the royal suite by District Commissioner J. E. F. Campbell, Ethiopian Consul-Gen. Ylma Walda and other officials, including representatives of the Greek and Russian orthodox churches, the other superior of the Ethiopian convent and many priests and nuns.

Mistress Of The Air.

Barring the unexpected, thousands this morning will look up to behold the Hindenburg as she swings in from her first North Atlantic crossing. The applause will be loud enough for crew and passengers to hear it from their airy cabins and gondolas. None viewing the giant Zeppelin, indeed, will withhold their cheers, except those who see only the military implications of the flight and thereby bear out the theory that suspicion is the shadow of the human soul.

Fear, envy and all the rest of the Pandora swarm will have no part in the welcome of the Hindenburg. Just as the Queen Mary will shortly afterward be greeted without the slightest discount for her foreign registry, so the Zeppelin will find nothing but wholehearted congratulation when she lands at Lakehurst. For when it comes to ships of so advanced a character, home ports are incidental; the whole world shares in their titles. Slide rules know no borders and genius outranges any national flag. The important consideration is the fact that Man is at their helms.

In the case of the Hindenburg, of course, the Man is Hugo Eckener. And it is significant to note that the swastika on the rudder of his masterpiece is of so little consequence—either to those cheering his success or to him. In what this dirigible represents, the blemish of the Nazi emblem is about as important as is the pettyness of Dr. Goebbels in the long and distinguished record of German history.

Navy and other lighter-than-air experts, having been invited to make a tour of inspection of the ship, are awaiting the Hindenburg's arrival impatiently. Only last January, at the request of the Secretary of the Navy, a group of distinguished engineers published a careful report recommending that the Nation should not permit the Shenandoah, the Akron and the Macon to have crashed in vain. The Durand board concluded that dirigibles are feasible not only from a military point of view but more especially as commercial ventures. The Hindenburg seems to confirm their studied opinion.

Means To An End.

Gov. Landon makes a shrewd and searching observation when he says that "the whole purpose of our party system is to be a means to an end," that end being simply "good government."

This often neglected principle of political philosophy is fundamental. Few Americans realize the full extent of our dependence upon party organizations as instruments of government. Hence they often forget how essential it is to conceive of the party as a vital agency for the achievement of progressive national improvement, instead of merely as a medium through which to bid for personal and political power.

Issues vital to the welfare of the Nation e settled at the polls by votes cast for the st part by registered party members. enever these partisan affiliations crysize into a blind allegiance to meaning- slogans and labels, democratic institu- are seriously endangered. Indeed, nment by parties cannot survive, in nited States or any other democracy, the electorate finds the party system ed of reasonably responsive and le agencies. No party can safely on references to its past record, or itself irrevocably to certain fixed es. Furthermore, to play its role ernment successfully, every party void the mistake of blindly com- the policies adopted or advocated e in power.

His advice to the Re- ns sums up a program of action able to any group that desires to com- effective political action with the r end of constructive service to the on. A minority party has never had e sound advice than his declaration "the Republican Party must prepare itself to be the instrument by which the American people can obtain good government."

Sabotaging Slum Clearance.

It is inconceivable that the House Appropriations Committee realized the implications of its action when it slashed a $300,000 allowance to the District Alley Dwelling Authority from the current deficiency supply bill. The effect of this cut would be to terminate local slum-reclamation work on June 30. Washingtonians will not believe that a committee of Congress would knowingly make such a decision.

Questions asked by committee members at the hearing indicate prevalence of the mistaken idea that the alley dwelling act limits appropriations for that purpose to $500,000. Since the authority has already been granted $700,000, including $200,000 from WPA, the committee concludes that no further appropriation should be included in the current bill. By completely eliminating the section pertaining to the Alley Dwelling Authortiy, however, the committee would prevent that agency from using even those funds now available. A poorly drafted provision in the alley dwelling act makes annual appropriations essential to continued activity on the part of the authority.

Should Congress approve the bill as it now stands, the work of the authority would come to a dead stop. Obligations could not be met; unfinished business would be left in a state of chaos, and there would be no agency to administer the projects already acquired by the authority. To terminate the work of reclaiming Washington's wretched alleys would be bad enough. To do so in this arbitrary manner is unthinkable.

Obviously the threat of summary destruction for the Alley Dwelling Authority is a blunder. Scarcely less serious, however, is the more deliberate attempt of the House Appropriations Committee to deny that organization additional funds essential to prosecution of its work. Rough estimates place the cost of eliminating Washington's inhabited alleys at $15,000,000. Congress has instructed the ADA to complete that job within ten years. With only $700,000 in capital, this mandate of course cannot be fulfilled.

As the alley dwelling act was originally drawn it called for an appropriation of $3,000,000, to be used as a revolving fund until the work is completed. When the sum to become immediately available was reduced to $500,000, that amount was clearly understood to be an initial appropriation. The act has been so construed by the Comptroller General and the Budget Bureau. Any other interpretation leads to patent absurdities.

This local undertaking is the only practical slum-reclamation project sponsored by the Government. Under the systematic and careful direction of John Ihlder, disease-infested, crime-breeding shacks are being steadily replaced by low-cost housing projects, garages, parking lots, parks, playgrounds and commercial properties of various kinds. No spectacular results have been attained; none have been either promised or sought. But a considerable amount of useful employment has been provided. Squalid sections of the city have already been greatly improved in appearance. And a considerable number of families have happily moved from the degraded surroundings which the authority was created to eliminate.

From the viewpoints of public health, city planning, law enforcement, economic advancement and human welfare this is the beginning of a very substantial achievement. The social gain is the more admirable because it is not expected to involve an enormous outlay of public funds. Of course, the ADA must have capital with which to operate. But its activities are conducted on a business basis. Even in the rehousing of alley families, subsidies will on the whole be avoided.

At a time when enormous sums are being frittered away in very questionable projects it is incredible that any Congressional committee would so lightly sabotage this modest but model venture in slum reclamation. Of course, the Appropriations Committee will want to rectify its blunder. And if the real issue is laid before Congress, funds to continue the alley-clearance work will undoubtedly be forthcoming.

Again, Congratulations.

It's becoming almost monotonous, congratulating Mr. J. Edgar Hoover and his colleagues of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. But the capture of two notorious kidnapers, together with two lesser lights of the criminal world—all within a few hours—cannot pass unmentioned. Only a single name now remains on a list which was once appallingly long—that of the female impersonator, Robinson, who abducted Mrs. Stoll, of Louisville. And he, if anywhere within reach of the news, must be feeling none too secure. The odds are strongly against him.

As in few other instances, the Nation gets a full dollar's worth from its underwriting of the G-men. The price is small for the peace of mind resulting from the obliteration of the vicious fraternity of "snatchers." Meanwhile, of course, the F. B. I. has continued with its less spectacular duties. Its accounting corps, for example, which fights with adding machines rather than machine guns, is rendering the taxpayer high service in the detection (and prevention) of fake bankruptcies and similar frauds.

Very few, apart from those whose style is severely cramped by the efficiency of the F. B. I., will argue for curtailment of activity at this point in its development.

The Moral Is Clear.

Apparently two local Republican delegations will go to the Cleveland convention, each claiming to represent members of the G. O. P. in Washington. Reports are current that Democratic bosses have chosen a slate of "carpetbaggers and Federal officeholders" to represent voters of that party at the Philadelphia convention. On both sides of the political fence the situation is both ridiculous and unsavory.

Since 1916, when three rival delegations were thrown out of the Republican National Convention, the local G. O. P. had functioned with comparative harmony until this year. Its precinct chairmen are elected in each of 43 districts, and the routine procedure by which this group doubles its membership to form the State committee for the District, chooses its leaders and selects delegates to the national convention, has been carefully worked out. In practice, however, that procedure has evidently broken down to leave the local G. O. P. embarrassingly divided.

It remains for the credentials committee at Cleveland to pass upon the conflicting claims of these rival groups, so far as the convention is concerned. But the more important moral looming out of this schism points directly to the District primary election bill hidden away in a pigeonhole in the office of a House sub-committee. Under the machinery this measure would set up, party leaders and convention delegates would be elected by the rank and file of party members, and there would be far less chance of rump conventions, competing delegations, or political racketeering in general.

The dissatisfaction with existing conditions on the Democratic side has been expressed by John F. Costello, Democratic national committeeman for the District, and many others. In this case, the chief complaint is that the local organization's leadership does not in any way represent its membership and that outside residents are frequently chosen to attend national conventions.

Both parties have a vital interest in correcting these conditions. The humiliation which each is likely to suffer because of the irregularities in choosing delegates from the District ought to bring about a bipartisan drive to enact the primaries bill.

Maritime Memo.

Spring cleaning is in order along the Potomac, from the Three Sisters to Anacostia and beyond. It's the only sort of spring cleaning with which men have much patience—fixing up river craft for the season now at hand. This spring it has been more than a labor of love. For the recent flood left many boats in a condition where much more than a pot of paint has been needed to make them shipshape again.

This renovation is the pleasing side of water fever. But there is a more serious aspect, recently emphasized by Commodore W. E. Longfellow, water-safety expert of the American Red Cross. He calls it "the drowning season on the Potomac." Yet most such fatalities, if they are the result of overturned canoes and boats, are unnecessary. If a catapulted boatload could only remember to stick with the craft, in nearly nine times out of ten no lives would be lost. The ordinary canoe is capable of holding up four people, even when filled with water. In river emergencies, the point is to keep your canoe, as well as your head.

The Potomac is one of Washington's greatest assets. Therefore, it is the more tragic that every summer it takes so large a toll as a result of ignorance and needless panic. A few simple rules would prevent many of these drownings. And the most important, Commodore Longfellow tells us, is to "stay with the boat."

This is a grea-a-a-a-t country to live in. Things get funnier all the time. Now the G. O. P. has hired a brain trust, and indications are that the Presidential campaign will be waged on a Ph. D. basis.

"Hereafter only married men will be allowed to vote in Germany." Future candidates for offices in Germany will therefore make their appeals to the married women.

You can't tell how a politician stands when he's running for office.

Royal Roads To Learning.

The Saturday Review of Literature.

"Popularization" has long been an important word among writers and publishers. Many writers have made an honest living out of the popularization of science, history, economics, philosophy and other systems of scholarships. . . Many of them have succeeded not only in making a living but in getting across some fairly complicated ideas. Many of them, as a by-product, have interested some of their readers sufficiently to send them even into the "deep tracts." . . . There are other popularizers, however, who do serious injustice to the ideas they are supposedly trying to bring home to their audience; in fact, they frequently aim so low at their audience as to stultify both the idea and the reader. . . .

In short, there is good popularization and there is bad popularization. What the reading public wants is certainly not oversimplification, for the oversimplifier enjoys a brief success and a long oblivion. But the general reader will reward the writer who can clarify a complex idea without destroying its complexity. And often the best popularization in the scientific field is done by the scientists themselves, without benefit of rewrite men.

The Horse Is Stolen.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: What should be done with Mussolini? All must agree that he is a victorious bandit. He has flouted the League, the moral sense of civilization, and would turn back the clock of time to ages when war for conquest was the right of the strong against the weak.

Ethiopia is his. Should the nations of earth now insist upon sanctions as retribution against Mussolini, thereby doing great injury to the Italian people? Or should the wiser course be taken to let the biblical expression take care of Mussolini: "Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord?" If we can interpret divine justice in national as well as in individual affairs, Mussolini will have his day of accounting. Let that rest with a Power higher than a League of Nations.

Let the horse already stolen from the stable remain stolen. The time has passed to regain it. Let Mussolini with his "face saved" gloat over that satisfaction. But if he dares to use what he has already accomplished as a stepping stone to further conquest, then let our present peace notions go to the winds, as every patriot on earth arises to put him down as Europe arose as one man to overthrow Napoleon. By coupling his name with Napoleon, I compare the two only so far as a St. Helena fate may go.

Business Conditions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Glancing through current magazines of national circulation one cannot help but notice how much more advertising lineage is being used than six months or a year ago. Side by side with large appropriations for vast advertising campaigns, the bigger salaries and bonuses paid in 1935 over 1934 to many business executives, as shown by reports to the Securities Exchange Commission, reveal beyond penadventure that the sinews of commerce are fruitful.

The stock market, always considered the barometer of industrial conditions in our established system of production for profit, reflects a stronger bull sentiment than at any time in post-depression years. New issues are also being absorbed with more frequency since the debacle of 1929.

He would be a most disingenuous person who failed to realize that these economic improvements are significant. As the two major parties make preparations to hold their conventions, political strategists would do well to ponder the following proposition: Shall the present trend in business expansion go ahead on the basis of the safeguards erected by the Federal Government, or do the people whose earnings have made possible a greater consumption of goods and services desire a revision to the fool's paradise built by the champion of laissez-faire?

The preamble of our great charter is worth remembering: "We, the People of the United States, in order to . . . promote the general welfare, etc." The present Administration founded its works on that basic rock, and those who would tear down let them build a temple where the people may find greater faith.

The College Fraternity.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Considering the number of college fraternities in Washington, there should be considerable local interest in the report of a committee appointed by the president of Dartmouth to inquire into the general subject of such fraternities. The report, as is usual with such committees, really consists of majority recommendations and minority recommendations, in the sound tradition of the Supreme Court, but, on the whole, the tendency is toward drastic changes.

The majority of the committee favor an ultimate dissolution of all affiliations between Dartmouth fraternity-chapters and the national organization of which they have heretofore been parts and the appointment of a "fraternity adviser", to direct local chapters. The minority would retain existing national affiliations, but suggest the appointment, as a college officer, of a "Fraternity supervisor," in whom shall be vested the "power of recommending fraternity improvements." The minority recommendations also include one to the effect that "repeated failure by a fraternity to follow (such) recommendations shall result in such action" as the president of the college "may deem wise and fitting."

The report throws an interesting light on the social side of college fraternities when it comes to deal with the question of dining rooms in fraternity houses. The committee finds that "the probable adverse effects (of these) outnumber and outweigh in importance the possible beneficial results." Eating in the fraternity houses might strengthen fraternities as social units, but the system would, as the Dartmouth Alumni Magazine summarizes the report, "detract from undergraduate democracy and the existing undivided loyalty to the college, would set the non-fraternity men more distinctly apart as a group, and would create serious difficulties in finances, buildings and management."

For my part, as a college man, I sincerely hope that, not only Dartmouth, but all colleges, will adopt, if not the letter of this report, at least its spirit. The college fraternity is out-moded. It is indeed "undemocratic." And the teaching of the democratic spirit should be the first care of all college curricula.

Summer Concerts.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Having read in the newspapers that it was unlikely there would be any symphony concerts this summer, it was with great pleasure I learned of Yascha Bunchuk's idea to engage the musicians and continue to give us the very good music which we all have so enjoyed.

In view of this fine offer it is hard indeed to fathom the opposition to it, and one wonders what is at the bottom of it all.

For some of these people who claim not to know who Yascha Bunchuk is—it seems apparent that it is time for them to brush up on things musical, for Mr. Bunchuk is easily one of the finest conductors of our time—a talented and finished musician with a wide range of experience.

JAMES H. COUGHLIN.
Washington, May 7.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In re, the symphony situation: At the present time difficulties between our National Symphony and labor officials remain so serious as to menace next winter's concerts. Then just how is it possible to announce summer concert dates when no adjustment of these labor difficulties is in sight?

Furthermore, how could C. Marshall Finnan be so prejudiced as to refuse the use of the watergate to Mr. Yascha Bunchuk when our National Symphony contemplates only eight concerts all summer which, under existing conditions, cannot possibly take place.

For those Washingtonians who profess to be ignorant of Mr. Bunchuk's distinguished artistry, it would be well for them to extend their knowledge of the music world.

Yascha Bunchuk, a real personality in the realm of genius, enjoys the esteem and respect of countless thousands who recognize him as an artist and gentleman.

The Capital of the Nation should bow its head in shame for the unjust attitude assumed toward one humane enough to provide work for our unemployed Washington musicians whose welfare through the summer months seemed to be of no concern to the officials of our own National Symphony.

HELEN BROOKLEY.
Washington, May 7.

The Single Tax.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Answering several inquiries, the single tax plan of Henry George is a tax upon the community value of land and simply takes for the community that which justly belongs to it.

As demonstrated in theory and practice it would restore land from the grip of monopoly to the user of it as a result of taxing away all "water" from its selling price. It would reduce the present selling price of land by about 90 per cent. It would, in effect, open up a new continent in our midst thus providing opportunity for men not satisfied by current wages or salaries.

By removal of all taxes upon capital and labor and their products great impetus would be given to the production of wealth with consequent prosperity. Resulting benefits would be employment for all at higher salaries and better wages, lower rents, simplified government with enormous saving in cost with reduction of crime because of the ability of everyone to earn a good living honestly.

Commerce is the operation of transporting merchandise from places where values are smaller to where they are larger and is, therefore, a highly important force of wealth production. Any interference with commerce is worse than stupid. The single tax would provide free trade which incidentally is the greatest of all forces for international peace and good will. Our present system of taxation penalizes prosperity at every turn with a multiplicity of taxes. These taxes must be repealed before we can have prosperity.

The entire proposition is based upon justice and involves injustice to no one.

The Manteo Rescue.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is not surprising that people question the accuracy of all news published in the newspapers when they come across an instance such as I have. Last Saturday, May 2, a man was drowned at Manteo, N. C., and the accident was reported in the Sunday papers. One paper stated that the men in the party whose boat overturned in the surf were rescued by the Coast Guard, and another stated that the rescue was made by Capt. George Hassell and another man.

Both of these reports were grossly erroneous and far from the facts. As I happened to be fishing with two friends in the boat that made the rescue, I desire to give you the actual facts. The boat was captained by Capt. George Mann, of the Bodie Island Club, N. C., and was handled in the most skillful manner I have ever seen, and Capt. George Mann should receive full credit for his bravery and seamanship in going to the rescue of the men in the overturned boat. No other boat attempted to assist us, although there were several nearby and the Coast Guard never knew of the accident or made any attempt to assist in any way.

Temporary Jobs.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have read with interest the editorial, "The Ten Thousand," in your issue of May 5, referring to ousted Government employees due to changes and liquidations of temporary Government agencies.

Aside from the pertinent facts you mention, these employes have evidently overlooked the fact that they were hired on a temporary basis, that their jobs were to be of short duration, but in nearly every instance have lasted much longer than they anticipated. What claim, then, do these employes have on Uncle Sam for a permanent berth?

The answer must be in the negative, but the answer to the fight for continued, if not permanent, work goes back to the ill principle that once you permit a man to hitch on to the public treasury (any public treasury) for wages or compensation, you must put up a fight to keep him from becoming a permanent beneficiary.

Matter Or Manner?

Post Office, Saturday.

A VERY pretty question is raised by a letter to this Column from that militant feminist and valued contributor, Lelia Kestler. It is raised, as most such questions are, not in the form of a deliberate challenge, but rather in the form of an oratorical query dropped parenthetically—without any expectation of response.

Mrs. Kestler begins by supplying us with some moral support from historically old—but eternally young—parson poet Herrick, regarding the use of the so-called "double."

You may recall how we ourselves were censured for employing a "double"—for writing a phrase like "It was in 1926 that he began to teach," instead of "He began to teach in 1926." You may recall how we summoned, in our defense, expert witness from Shakespeare to Kipling. And you may recall how we said we wished we had time to find and include in our evidence, some example provided by the Seventeenth Century lyricist whose religious verse is as good as his love-songs.

"'Twas while I was flicking dust from the bookcase," Mrs. Kestler writes us, "that out popped a moth humming a ditty the notes of which sounded strangely familiar:

"'Tis thou that crown'st my glittering hearth
With guiltless mirth
And giv'st me wassail bowls to drink.
Spiced the brink.
Lord, tis Thy plenty-dropping hand
That sows my land!"

Thus does Mrs. Kestler furnish us with the quotation we wanted—from Herick's poem "A Thanksgiving."

* * *

Then, however, she goes on to indicate that, in her opinion, people have no right to quarrel over such details as "doubles." Substance, says she, is the thing that counts, and this Column, she adds, has lots of it.

"Of what consequence," she inquires, "is form without substance?"

Now, we are humbly grateful for Mrs. Kestler's compliment. Nevertheless, our modest point was that both our matter and our manner attained impeccability. And we do join issue with her broad contention.

Matter matters. But manner matters, too. The trouble with much modern matter which passes for literary criticism today is precisely its basic assumption that manner doesn't matter at all.

This columnist contends that almost nothing worth writing can be effectively written unless it is written with one eye fixed rigidly on the form of its expression. Quite ninety percent of such works as endure a year after their production owe their survival, not to the fact that they are good story, history, philosophy or economics, but to the fact that their thought has been given the garment of effective form.

Why does Mrs. Kestler's memory retain that stanza which she quotes from Herrick? Its thought—and she knows it—was expressed many a time before Herrick, has been expressed many a time since. She remembers it because of its effective form.

Suppose that, on the 9th of November, 1863, a certain man had said:

"Eighty-seven years ago, our American ancestors started a new kind of Government. They had the idea that government ought to give people liberty and everybody had equal rights. Now we're staging a big scrap which'll prove whether that idea's practical; and here we are, right at the ringside, ready to rope off some of the ring for a graveyard, for a memorial to the men who took a licking in it. You'll agree that's O. K."

Doubtless you would have agreed that it was O. K. But how long would you have remembered what Lincoln said at Gettysburg?

* * *

Not only does this columnist believe that most literary survivals owe their endurance to their form. We'll go further. You can reasonably disapprove of an author's substance and yet admire his form.

Millman praised Gibbon's style.

Or further still: Much has survived that, when analyzed, is found not to have any substance at all—a lot, for instance, of Swinburne.

* * *

When a radical critic declares that form is of no consequence, there must be something wrong with radical criticism.

THE WHIPPING POST.

The more we love a magazine, the more delicate our delight in finding it human enough to err. Editorially, the Saturday Review of Literature assures its readers: "Out of the heterogeneous mass of material which the WPA workers are gathering the selective instinct of the historian or novelist should be able to pick out strands of conduct and action which will be illuminating to a high degree." If two negatives make an affirmative, do two outs make an in?

The Once Over

Mothers and "Mikes"

A singer on the radio has been ordered by the Federal Communications Commission to quit bidding goodby to his mother over the air. It defines it as a personal communication and therefore not permissible on a radio hour.

* * * *

The singer has made it a practice to conclude every radio program with "Good night, mother," thereby making quite a hit with radio fans who have mothers. It reminded so many of them that they hadn't written her a letter in months.

* * * *

And mothers everywhere went for the broadcast in a big way, realizing that they hadn't heard from their boy since he sent the wire, "Send me $10 at once," seven months ago.

* * * *

Radio performers everywhere were also duly impressed. Greetings to mother presently began to fly through the ozone in a volume exceeded only by that of the gargle testimonials and the talks on beer.

* * * *

Masters of ceremonies, who left their mothers back in Poland years ago, began wishing the dear old ladies sweet dreams, jazz orchestra leaders, who had forgotten whether mother was a short or tall woman, began wishing them every happiness, and there was a rumor in Radio City that a comic, who had been a foundling and didn't know his relatives, was planning to sign off with the tender message, "And now, in closing, I wanna send love and kisses to my brothers and sisters, wherever they may be."

* * * *

There had been some fear expressed that the idea might go so far that a mother might get onto an amateur night program and deliever a blast for the maters of America whose sons still owed them an answer to their letters of December 22, 1921. And as a protest against mixing motherly love with halitosis cures, cough lozenges, nonirritating cigarettes, face creams, old gags and musical cues.

* * * *

The Federal Communications Commission found that in the specific case before it, the radio star had a mother, was addressing her personally, and that she always tuned in and listened. But it is fearful of the possibilities.

* * * *

Those Dionne quints may go on the air any day now. And suppose they all start bidding mother good night at once.

The Major Need.

The result in Ethiopia is said by the experts to have established many important points, but to this department it has established nothing except that the League of Nations should have a department in poker playing.

"The League must go on," say a number of outstanding diplomats. They still talk in terms of the theater.

It seems that what the Italians did was to take the sanctions and knit sweaters out of them.

Elmer Twitchell pictures the wandering king of the Ethiopians singing, "Way Down Upon the Swanee River" with especial emphasis on "everywhere I Rome."

"The Zeppelin has a bookcase which contains a handful of travel books, plus a copy of 'Anthony Adverse.'"—New York American. Bigness, always bigness!

Ima Dodo insists she looked over the Zep's library and that among the books are "Bag Ballads," a couple of novels by Anthony Hopp and "a lot of those wonderful stories about the Arabian Flights."

British Crusader Urges New League

Columbus, Ohio, May 8 (AP).—George Lansbury, British peace crusader, proposed today establishment of a new League of Nations based on "collective security through service and co-operation instead of war." He addressed the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church as it ended its first week, with a meeting of international peace.

Lansbury's plea for a warless world came as the committee on the state of the church added new fuel to a battle between conservatives and liberals within the church, by rejecting a resolution of Thomas F. Holgate, of Evanston, Ill., for establishment of an official commission to speak for the church on social, economic, and industrial matters.

The Holgate resolution had the support of conservatives seeking to curb the liberal Methodist Federation for Social Service, whose demands for approval of planned social economy instead of the profit system are now before the conference.

Dr. G. Bromley Oxnam, of Depauw University, as chairman of a sub-committee considering the Holgate resolution, recommended nonconcurrence by the committee.

500 Pupils Walk Out In Free-Lunch Dispute

Tampa, Fla., May 8 (U.P.).—Five hundred pupils of the V. M. Ybor and Philip Shore Grammar Schools walked out of their classes today in a strike protesting "discrimination" in distribution of free lunches by a Government agency.

Five police cars were rushed to the Ybor section of the city as the pupils left their classes.

The Outlook For India

Nationalist Party Split By Nehru's Socialism; Forebodes Fighting.

The Post presents the second of two articles by a well-known British commentator on imperial affairs who has just returned from Delhi. His observations are particularly timely in the light of Italy's victory over Ethiopia which is a blow to British prestige and may be one having far-reaching implications in respect to the future of England's colonial empire.

By Commander Stephen King-Hall.
Special Correspondence of The Post.
London.

THE NATIONALIST CONGRESS which assembled for its annual meeting at Lucknow in 1936 was rent in twain, since long hours of discussion at Delhi by the steering committee had not produced a formula which would unite the two wings. Even Mr. Gandhi, who had "retired" from politics in order to pursue his campaign for the uplift of the depressed classes, apparently did not feel that it was expedient for him to emerge and try the effect of his prestige upon the warring elements.

The outward and visible subject of discussion was whether or not the congress should fight the forthcoming elections, the first to be held under the new constitution of India, and, in the event of victory, whether members of the party should accept office. One school of thought held that the congress owed all its vitality to its position as an irreconcilable body pledged to complete independence and that, having declared the new constitution to be a mockery, the party could not work it without a grave danger of losing its identity.

Another, though less advertised, reason for insisting that the congress, even if it agreed to fight the elections, should nevertheless refuse office, was the realization that the party is not at all well supplied with men competent to accept such office.

Another section of the congress led by men who were already sitting in the legislative assemblies and who were attracted by the prospects of cabinet rank, argued that the new constitution does not confer great powers on provincial governments and that a moment would soon arrive, even if it had not come already, when the congress supporters would become tired of a purely obstructive attitude on the part of their representatives.

Question Of Election Strategies Only Secondary.

THIS DIFFERENCE of opinion upon the political tactics to be adopted at the forthcoming elections, a question which has been shelved until the summer, was, however, only a superficial aspect of the deep gulf which separates those congressmen who have gone Socialist under the leadership of Jawaharlal Nehru, from those who, while equally ardent Nationalists, are extremely orthodox in their economic and social theories.

Nehru adheres to a revolutionary philosophy mildly communistic in its practical implications. He has been looking at and admiring the achievements of Soviet Russia, and he feels that something of the same sort is the only solution of the economic problems of the Indian peasant. He objects to the new constitution not so much because it does not grant India all the privileges of Dominion status, but because it is a capitalist type of constitution and will tie one of his hands behind his back in the struggle which he has declared must be waged against Indian capitalism and landlordism.

He therefore demands that the congress should have no truck with the latest British "charter of slavery" and that its members should go down to the masses and preach socialism. It is estimated that about a third of the congress stands behind him in this matter. Of the remaining two-thirds some object to this advanced left wing program on grounds of principle, others on grounds of expediency.

The latter point out that landowners and business men have financed the congress, sometimes no doubt for purely patriotic reasons, but certainly on other occasions because it was a commercially useful investment. A case in point was the boycott organized by the congress of British goods, a patriotic gesture which was of considerable value to Indian mill-owners.

As explained in the first article in this series, Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru and his Marxian doctrines are likely to be hotly opposed by a combination of princes and capitalists, and even Nehru would admit that he has but a very ragged army with which to do battle against such a formidable and wealthy combination.

Indian Communism Will Fight Indian Capitalism.

ONE CANNOT but feel, as one moves about and discusses these matters with persons of all shades of opinion in India, that it is probable that we have seen the high watermark of the struggle between Indian nationalism and British imperialism, and that as the memories of that conflict fade into historical perspective the world will witness the development of a new battle, a battle between Indian socialism and Indian capitalism.

I fear that it may develop many unpleasant features, and even culminate in bloodshed and civil war, unless there emerges a middle-class, Liberal type of party which would convince the capitalists that concessions must be made to "forgotten men" before the latter decide to remind society of their existence in a violent manner.

That Nehru is right when he insists that the future of India depends upon the millions of agriculturists is admitted by all. It is almost impossible to exaggerate the need for social services in India, but as elsewhere the problem presents itself in the form of a vicious circle. Health and education services and the improvement of agricultural methods require large expenditures of public money, and the country is already heavily taxed. An increase of revenue cannot be expected until the standard of living of the people is raised, and that cannot happen until more money is invested in social services.

Inefficiency Inevitable Before India Learns To Rule Self.

From the point of view of the creation of an Indian nation one feels that communism will get worse before it gets better. It is already often political and economic in essence, though still usually manifesting itself in a religious garb. Ultimately in India, as elsewhere, class will dominate creed and race as an influence on the structure of society.

From the point of view of the future relations between Great Britain and India I doubt if the British electorate of, say, 1945, will be much interested in saving the skin of the Indian capitalist and landowner, provided the Indian socialists are sufficiently careful to skin their opponents in a constitutionanl manner, i. e. by due process of law resulting from majorities in the legislatures.

Nation Seen Suffering From Inferiority Complex.

IN CONCLUSION I note that as a result of my investigations I am impressed with the psychological nature of India's problem. India is suffering from an inferiority complex, as a consequence of the fact that for half a century and more her affairs have been administered by foreigners more efficiently than she could have done this for herself.

Inferiority complexes can only be removed by psychoanalysis, and only Indians can psychoanalyze India, which means that India must strip from herself some of the Western clothing in which she has been decked by the British and see herself naked. She must see for herself and by her own act, the poverty, the corruption, the inefficiency, the jealousies which she must overcome. But any woman—and India is intensely feminine—dislikes taking her clothes off in front of a man even when that man is a competent medical practitioner.

In order to provide India with undressing rooms Dr. John Bull, medical-political practitioner in the mystery of democracy, has established the independent provinces. It is devoutly to be hoped that he will not feel obliged to peep in through the keyhole to see how the patient is getting on, and that if her moans and groans make it necessary for him to enter the dressing rooms he will be very careful to knock at the door.

All of which is perhaps a rather fanciful way of saying that Indians must be allowed to rule themselves inefficiently in the provinces as part of the process of creating a new state in the world which at some distant date may be the bridge where Eastern and Western civilizations will join hands.

Student Gets Life In Slaying of Girl

Mansfield, Ohio, May 8 (U.P.).—Charles Wilson, 23-year-old student engineer, was saved from the electric chair tonight when a jury recommended mercy after finding him guilty of first-degree murder in the "jealousy" slaying of his young society sweetheart, Jean Moorhead, 17.

The verdict makes a sentence of life imprisonment mandatory.

The dapper Wilson broke down when the verdict was announced. He fell on the counsel table and wept, hiding his face in his hands.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph E. Moorhead, socially prominent parents of Jean, who was shot to death as she sat in an automobile with another man on the night of April 4, were not in the courtroom.

Defense attorneys, who had pleaded that Wilson was temporarily insane at the time of the shooting, said they would ask for a new trial.

Anti-Jewish Parade Due in Vienna Today

Vienna, May 8 (AP).—Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg, it was disclosed tonight, will speak tomorrow before 15,000 members of Austria's Freiheitsbund (Christian workers uniformed private army), who are scheduled to stage Vienna's first anti-Jewish parade since the authoritarian state was proclaimed in 1934.

The Freiheitsbund weekly today described the parade as a "protest against Jewish infamy" adding: "The parade will not disturb the peace, but it will be an eye-opener to Austrian Christians, who have been victims of Jewish practices for years."

Legitimate Drama

By William Lyon Phelps

Best Fifteen Plays.

I give my choice of the best plays of the new season in alphabetical order. Ordinarily, I should find difficulty in selecting ten best plays; this season I am forced by the excellent productions to extend the list to 15.

* * * *

"Dead End."—Tremendously impressive tragic drama by Sidney Kingsley, presented by Norman Bel Geddes.

"End of Summer."—Brilliant conversation piece by S. N. Behrman, with twin stars, Ina Claire and Osgood Perkins.

"Ethan Frome." — This literary masterpiece by Edith Wharton is turned into a thrilling tragedy by Owen Davis and his son Donald, and acted by three stars—Pauline Lord, Ruth Gordon and Raymond Massey.

"First Lady."—A delightful comedy of Washington life. Witty and hilarious. The star is Jane Cowl.

"Idiot's Delight." — The accomplished Robert E. Sherwood has surpassed his best previous efforts. It is beautifully produced by the Theater Guild, with the incomparable Lynn Fontanne and Alfred Lunt.

"Libel."—A British drama of the courtroom, a tense intensive study of libel. Produced by Gilbert Miller.

"Murder in the Cathedral."—T. S. Eliot's poetic tragedy of the death of Thomas Becket. This has somewhat the effect of a pageant, but is surprisingly interesting.

"Night of January 16." — This American murder mystery play can be instructively compared with "Libel," for judicial conduct and legal etiquette.

"On Stage."—A purely imaginative play by Mr. Kaye, with Osgood Perkins as star; produced by Rowland Stebbins.

"Pride and Prejudice."—This impeccable novel by Jane Austen transformed into an impeccable play by Miss Jerome, of England, and impeccably produced with an impeccable cast by Max Gordon.

"Remember the Day." — This charming American comedy of love in school was a fine autumn crocus in 1935.

"Russet Mantle."—This American comedy by Lynn Riggs has some very fine passages and some dull spots. But it increases my faith in the author's future.

"Saint Joan." — This work of genius by Bernard Shaw has never been more splendidly acted than by Katharine Cornell and her company.

"Victoria Regina." — Laurence Housman, the English poet, wrote, at great length, a series of historical episodes. With uncanny skill shown in selection, with the genius of Helen Hayes as the queen, and with Gilbert Miller as producer, I think it might run for three years.

The season was also distinguished by the Theater Guild's production of "Taming of the Shrew," by Eva La Gallienne's revival of Ibsen's "Rosmersholm," and by Mme. Nazimova's revival of Ibsen's "Ghosts."

Industrialists, Roosevelt Hold Jobs Parleys

Chrysler, Young, Baruch Consulted by President in Last Week.

Doggedly pursuing the still unsolved problem of re-employment, President Roosevelt revealed yesterday that he had been taking counsel with the Nation's industrial chiefs on methods to expand operations of two particular industries as yet comparatively unresponsive to repeated attempts at stimulation—railroad equipment and construction.

With month after month slipping by and with no really outstanding progress discernible in getting men back to work, the President has redoubled his attack on re-employment in recent weeks.

He has directly demanded of business and industry that more jobs be created and expressed himself as delighted when the United States Chamber of Commerce proposed a survey of job possibilities in industry.

In the past week, Walter P. Chrysler, auto manufacturer, Owen D. Young, electrical industry chief, and Bernard M. Baruch, financier, have been consulted by the President at the White House.

Suggestions Asked.

Mr. Roosevelt told reporters yesterday that he had asked the industrialists for suggestions on ways to increase employment in the durable goods industries. He mentioned the railroad equipment and construction industries as typical of those which have large expansion possibilities that are being blocked by various obstacles.

The improvement of railroad capital structures, the President emphasized, is necessary in order to free the roads to buy equipment and thus spur employment. Heavy fixed capital charges are responsible for the railroads' inability to buy, he said.

The President added that no legislation is contemplated at this time in connection with this railroad problem. He said it was not a question of further loans of money from the Government, as the railroads' present capital structure would not permit repayment.

Interested in Housing.

Speculation immediately began on the line that the President may have in mind a plan to liberalize present laws in order to allow railroads to scale down fixed charges through reorganization. The way to railroad reorganization is at present open, some experts hold, but the railroads themselves show no disposition to move in that direction, they point out.

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation thus far has disbursed $495,000,000 to railroads, it has reported, but this has gone to interest charges, taxes and financing, with funds available for equipment buying comparatively untouched.

The second section of the President's discussions with the industrial chieftains, he disclosed, has concerned housing. Repeated surveys have shown the vast idleness in the construction trades despite the very considerable housing pick-up in the past year.

The chief problem here is the production in profitable quantities of low-cost homes, ranging around the $2,500 figure. The big construction pick-up has taken place in the $5,000 bracket, generally, held to be the lowest profitable point for builders.

Mass Plans Fail.

However, with the most acute need for homes in the classes able only to afford a $2,500 home, no means has as yet been found to produce such a home on a volume basis.

That was the substance of the President's remarks in this connection. He stressed that home construction for low-income groups must be on this volume basis, not on a local machine-shop production basis.

The president, illustrating this, said he had asked Mr. Chrysler how much it would cost an individual machine shop to turn out an automobile whose specifications were estimated at $600 on a production basis. He said Mr. Chrysler had told him it would cost $3,500.

Mass home production efforts thus far have been unsuccessful, although some progress is being made. At this point no profit can be found in such a risky undertaking, although Federal Housing Administration officials said that cement manufacturers have drawn plans for building homes on a large scale to cost as little as $2,300 each; steel companies are experimenting on house frames of steel, and lumber interests are studying low-cost pre-fabrication ideas.

Favor Ship Subsidy.

Low-cost home production would directly supplement aims of the Roosevelt-approved housing bill of Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), New York, which would authorize Federal loans and grants for slum clearance and low-rent apartment building construction.

A conference with the President and Senator Wagner, Secretary of the Treasury Henry L. Morgenthau, jr., Chairman Jesse H. Jones, of the RFC, and Chairman David I. Walsh (Democrat), Massachusetts, will be held early in the week to settle financial angles of the Wagner bill, it was predicted.

The President expressed hopes for the passage of a ship subsidy bill, but did not specify which of the four pending measures in Congress has his approval.

He referred to the movement of transients across State lines in search of work as a serious problem, but declined to discuss constitutional aspects of the matters involved by States closing their borders to such transients.

Jewish Drive Workers Report $58,000 Raised

Workers in the United Jewish Appeal met yesterday at the Jewish Community Center and reported a total of $58,000 raised toward a goal of $75,000 for relief of Hebrews abroad.

Isidore Hershfield, chairman of the meeting, announced the drive would close officially next Wednesday at noon. Hershfield appealed to workers to bring in at least 500 more contributions during the next few days.

House Wrangles Over Naming TVA Dam After McReynolds

Appropriation Bill Amendment Also Would Call Second Project After Rankin; Republican Urges Public Works to Honor Every Democrat.

The naming of Government dams stirred a controversy in the House yesterday with consideration of the deficiency appropriation bill.

Tucked into the section of the bill providing an appropriation for the Tennessee Valley Authority was a provision that the name of the Chickamauga Dam in Tennessee be changed to the McReynolds Dam, in honor of Representative McReynolds, of Tennessee.

This brought forth an amendment to change the name of the Pickwick Landing Dam to the Rankin Dam, in honor of Representative Rankin, of Tennessee. Representative McSwain (Democrat), of South Carolina, chairman of the Military Affairs Committee, fought both proposals.

Speaker Byrns, sitting among the members while the House was meeting as a Committee of the Whole, made a plea for honoring McReynolds.

"If it had not been for Judge McReynolds there would be no dam there," Byrns told the House. "I think it is a merited and deserved honor."

The McReynolds name change was allowed to remain in the bill, but the Rankin change was voted down.

At the close of the debate Representative Short (Republican), of Missouri, introduced an amendment to provide that one public works project be named for each Democratic member of Congress and that none of the projects should cost less than $10,000,000. The amendment was ruled out of order.

Alternate Tax Plans Studied

Couzens Gives Views.

Prominent among the opponents to the Administration's plan is one influential Republican, who recently was inclined to favor the proposal until he weighed evidence against it by experts. He is Senator James Couzens, of Michigan, who explained his position in an interview last night.

"I have been very patiently studying the conclusion that the President has overestimated the extent of withholding of an unreasonable amount of earnings," Couzens said. "While I am in sympathy with getting at those fellows who unreasonably withhold earnings for tax avoidance purposes, I am unwilling to penalize other companies."

The Michigan Senator said he was impressed by the figures that 97 per cent of the corporations of the country have 250 employes or less, and employ 48 per cent of all persons in industry.

"I think it is perfectly absurd to punish 97 per cent of the corporations employing 48 per cent of the people, to get at some isolated cases," he said.

"Another decided weakness of the bill, as I see it, is that certain large companies will pay no taxes. The American Telephone & Telegraph Co. is an instance. I do not want to name one company as an example, and I only pick out A. T. & T. because it is a public utility and a nationally known industry. There are scores of others, all rich companies, which either would pay no taxes or less taxes than they now pay."

New Section Urged. . .

Although Couzens said he had no explicit substitute plan of his own, he said he saw no sound reason for upsetting the whole tax structure, and believed that a large number of committee members are in favor of cutting out all of the bill relating to the undistributed corporate earnings tax, after the enacting clause, and writing an entirely new bill in that respect.

Couzens said he had heard one plan discussed that would raise the existing corporation income tax to a flat 20 per cent rate, and make dividends subject to the normal tax of 4 per cent, or possibly increasing the normal income tax rate to as much as 6 per cent. He was not inclined to favor imposition of a surtax on undistributed earnings, on top of the corporation income tax, and expressed an unwillingness to experiment greatly with taxation.

Senator Connally, whose plan to salvage the present corporation income tax and superimpose an equivalent surtax on undistributed earnings has mustered considerable support, is opposed to the bill primarily because he believes it saddles a disproportionate share of the tax on small stockholders. He believes it might tend also to freeze business at present levels and prevent small concerns from expanding.

Barkley Is Supporter.

An outstanding supporter of the Administration's plan on the committee is Senator Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky, who will be keynoter at the Democratic National Convention. He believes that in the final analysis, Congress will enact into law the principles enunciated by the President, with only such changes as would ameliorate obvious injustices.

The Administration has three chances to save its bill from overthrow. The first tussle will come in the Senate Finance Committee, which meets next week to consider changes, in executive session. The next fight will come on the floor of the Senate, when the Administration is expected to marshall all of its forces behind the bill. The last stand will come in conference, when the House is expected to go down the line for the Administration plan.

As Public hearings moved to conclusion, the Finance Committee yesterday heard another long list of business witnesses reiterate their solid opposition to the bill, and one urgent plea for reduction of taxes from a Broadway producer.

Max Gordon, producer of numerous successes, said taxation had reached a point in the show business where after paying the Government a producer had little left to finance another show.

Favors Big Productions.

"You ought to encourage the making of big productions, because it puts men to work," Gordon told the committee, remarking that show producing "is a very hazardous business."

Stating there are only two musical shows now running on Broadway, he said individual producers are being driven from the field by high taxes and the resulting tendency is toward monopoly. Out of $200,000 made on a show, he argued, the Government collects $120,000 in taxes. Hollywood actors have been hit to the extent that they find it more remunerative to do less work, he testified.

Speaking for Women Investors in America, Inc., Catherine Curtis, national director, said women own 48 per cent of the stock in 40 large, representative companies, and "have a tremendous stake in the equities of American industry."

She called the pending proposal a "vicious, unsound and revolutionary tax bill, which not only strikes at the heart of American industry, but at the principle of thrift and conservation, without which no family, no corporation and no Government can survive and prosper."

Would Drop Proposal.

She recommended "abandonment" of the proposal and the immediate appointment of a special committee of Congress, tax experts and experienced business men to formulate an equitable tax plan.

Arguing that the revolutionary tax plan would "stunt the growth" of little companies, and promote monopoly, James V. Toner speaking for the New England Manufacturing Jewelry and Silversmith's Association, said that apart from raising new revenue, the pending bill "seems rather to be a regulatory or punitive measure."

Out of 17 witnesses heard yesterday, only one, Albert Hubschman, New York attorney, indorsed the principle contained in the President's proposal. Hubschman, however, insisted the House bill did not apply correctly the Administration's plan.

Relief Wages

"The gentleman is an optimist indeed if he thinks turning money over to the States would get so-called politics out of administration of relief," he said.

Woodrum presented the bill barring from relief aliens illegally in the United States. Representative Marcantonio (Republican), New York, bitterly fought the move. An attempt by Representative Stubbs (Democrat), California, to bar all aliens was defeated. The Woodrum amendment was adopted, 136 to 19.

By a voice vote an amendment by Representative Church (Republican), Illinois, to prohibit any of the appropriation from being used by the Resettlement Administration, headed by Dr. Rexford G. Tugwell, was defeated. Chairman Buchanan assured the House that all of the money would be disbursed by the Works Progress Administration, although the bill contains an appropriation of $85,500,000 for "rural rehabilitation and relief to farmers."

An attempt to add a provision specifying that some of the money be used for grade-crossing elimination was voted down with an explanation from the committee that the item for highways covered grade crossings. The House also defeated an amendment providing that none of the appropriation should be used for transient camps.

Beiter's amendment in behalf of the Public Works Administration, provided for earmarking of $349,950,000 for that purpose. His bloc originally had asked that the amount be $700,000,000. The movement, which once threatened to assume considerable proportions, collapsed completely. The PWA earmarking was opposed by President Roosevelt.

50 Hurt in Greek Riot As Police Charge 6,000

Davis Expected To Take Stump On Return Here

Speculation on AAA Chief Future Also Includes Reserve Board Post.

The future career of Chester C. Davis, AAA Administrator now on European furlough to study prospects for increasing the Nation's foreign trade, became matter for speculation yesterday.

As predicted at the time of his departure in April for foreign places, Davis may be in line for another post in the Administration set-up on his return to report to the President.

He had worked at a terrific pace, it was generally agreed, in handling the AAA through its latter periods, and particularly in setting up the Soil Conservation program on the ruins of the AAA, when that was invalidated by the Supreme Court on January 6.

May Take Stump.

The three possibilities mentioned yesterday by informed sources included:

That Davis would take the stump through the Midwest in the summer to explain to farmers the new farm program, and incidentally to offset expected attacks on the Administration by George N. Peek, former AAA chief and later head of the Export-Import Bank. Peek and Davis both carry considerable personal prestige in the Cornbelt area, and some observers hold that Davis's influence will be needed during the campaign, in order to counteract Peek's expected blasts at the New Deal.

That he might return to private business.

That he might become the farmer representative in the still vacant position on the Federal Reserve Board.

First Most Likely.

The first of these three surmises was regarded generally as the most likely. Davis sailed with an assistant, and both were to pay particular attention to foreign cotton market possibilities, it was understood.

This week Davis's secretary sailed for Europe, apparently to join her chief. It was understood she would prepare his report from dictation on the return trip. Davis will arrive at the end of May.

In the meantime Howard R. Tolley, acting AAA Administrator, is proceeding smoothly in troning out details of the present complex farm program, far more ramified than the original AAA, and even more far-reaching in ultimate effects.

Davis, reached by the Associated Press in Paris yesterday, said:

"I know I still will be administrator when I return, but after that it's up to the President and the Secretary of Agriculture.

To Discuss Foreign Trade.

"When I get back to the States my task will be to try to show the American farmer what European trade prospects are.

"America has had three successive supports for its foreign agricultural market; first, the World War; second, the European crop shortage, and third, when we loaned Europe money.

"Now all three supports are gone and the foreign market is shrinking.

"American farmers must know the methods and capacities of foreign nations in order to aim at other markets after domestic powers of consumption are exhausted."

Commentators seized on these quotations as backing up the first of the three possibilities mentioned, since Peek has often attacked the foreign trade proportions of export and import in this country.

China Reds Routed In Shansi Invasion

Taiyuan Fu, Shansi Province, China, May 8 (AP).—A Communist army which overran southwestern Shansi Province was reported fleeing northward tonight after 1,000 of their soldiers were killed in a crushing air attack by planes of the national government.

Fliers of the Nanking government, sent here to aid in a determined movement against the Reds, said their bombs dealt a decisive blow to the Communist troops.

Time after time the fliers dived low over their foes to drop large quantities of explosives.

After the air raid, an infantry detachment was brought up, under support of the airplanes, to move against the Reds.

Capital Society Attends Opening of Horse Show

By Francesca McKenney.

Despite the heat in the Capital yesterday members of society drove to Bradley Farms to attend the opening day of the National Capital Horse Show. Many went early in time for luncheon served on the lawn by the Junior League of Washington.

All of the food was donated by the members of the league and all of it for the day had to be at the clubhouse before 9 in the morning. The league members therefore were seen walking or driving early to the modernistic clubhouse on Massachusetts avenue to leave their donation—a fried or baked chicken, stuffed eggs, sandwiches or other delicacies. At the entrance to the club was a large van in which the contributors were carried to Bradley Farms. Provisions will be taken by van again this morning and tomorrow.

The waitresses who served luncheon and tea were all members of the league and they wore white frocks and apple green smocks. Some of the girls went to the show grounds in the blimp which left Washington Hoover Airport in time to reach there for the first class.

On the grounds some of the Junior League girls took care of the concessions, conducting ice cream and cold drink stands, while others were busy persuading their friends to have tin-type pictures taken.

The show itself was exciting with a few spills, but none of them serious. One of the outstanding winners during the afternoon was Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim, who won three out of four in one class alone. Firenze Red Tape, who was judged the best hunter in the country by the American Horse Show Association, won the blue ribbon in that class.

Among those who attended the show during the late afternoon were Mrs. Benjamin Thaw and Mrs. Mondell Gregg, who occupied the box of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss, who were unable to attend. Capt. and Mrs. John Henry Gibbons, and Mr. and Mrs. Alex B. Legare occupied a box together, as did Mrs. Walter E. Edge and Mrs. David Key, who were accompanied by their children. Mrs. Ballard Moore, of Chicago, the former Miss Olyve Graef, who is spending some time in Washington with her mother, Mrs. H. Campbell Graef, was also in the box with Mrs. Edge.

The former Military Attache of the Cuban Embassy and Senora de Prieto were in a box with friends, as were Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mrs. Royal T. McKenna and Mrs. Robert V. Fleming, who was accompanied by Mrs. Sidney Taliaferro. Mr. and Mrs. Beverley Mason were in a box in the center of the grandstand. The latter wore a boucle frock of pale yellow with a large leghorn hat. Mrs. Mason, who is interested in horses, seemed to be much more interested in describing to her friends the improvement in her golf game.

Mrs. Bishop Hill, chairman of the Junior League committee, presented the handsome Junior League silver bowl to the winner of the hunter hack class.

Other there who stood by the rail were Mrs. William T. Mann, who was accompanied by the Second Secretary of the Spanish Embassy, Senor Don Ramon Padilla; Mrs. Merton A. English, jr., who was before her recent marriage Miss Betty West. Also Miss Laura Tuckerman, Miss Elsie Ekengren, Mr. William McComb, Mrs. Charles Bradley, Miss Stellita Stapleton, and Miss Jane Thorpe.

Today the members of the League will also serve luncheon and a special lunch for children, as today is designated as Children's Day. There will be pony rides for the youngsters and a tally-ho drawn by four handsome horses for them to take a ride. Chances will be sold as they were today and small puppies will be on sale at the grounds as well.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Every day's mail delivered to this department contains a liberal quota of opinions from readers, dealing with every subject under the sun. The following letters deal with problems which have already been considered here, and because they are interesting and self-explanatory, they seem well worth submitting without further comment. M. H.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: In your column weeks ago some woman wrote to the effect that she knew a fine man—and I believe she said he was one of the finest men she had ever known, but that he no sooner got married than his wife changed toward him and had made his life utterly miserable. I believe she said the man had not said so in so many words, but that she was basing her opinion on his actions.

I am a very busy person and have many things on my mind, but I have wanted to answer this woman and clarify her mind on a subject which she seems to be seeing through a knothole. I would like to say to this young woman (an unmarried woman, no doubt) that there is generally good reason for a wife's changing toward her husband after marriage, and that it takes shortcomings on the part of two persons to bring about such a situation. Married women know that men, too, change immediately after marriage, and that often it is this change in husbands which brings about a change in the wife's attitude.

* * * *

Tell this sister for me that I have in mind a man who was an ideal lover before marriage, but who, almost the minute the ceremony was performed, began giving his wife orders, finding fault with her, correcting this, correcting that, until it became virtually impossible for her to live with him. And yet he is the kind of man who makes a wonderfully good impression on persons who know him only casually.

* * * *

I wonder if she knows what most wives know—namely, that the average man has three sets of manners: one for the office, another for society and a third set for the home, and that a wife knows a man as no other person can ever know him. One of the greatest mistakes women make is in praising, flattering and sympathizing with men they don't really know; men who are too smart to show their dispositions and their tempers in their true light outside the home. These men who seem too good to be true usually have a time and a place for blowing off steam, and that time and place is in their homes when their wives are present.

* * * *

I know of another case in point. The husband, a handsome man who was generally very well liked, mistreated his wife for years and years. Then one day he knocked her down the steps when his temper was out of control, and the wife confessed the situation to a neighbor, who was surprised and shocked to learn the truth. It is impossible to make sound judgments of persons on the basis of their looks and manners outside the home.

* * * *

I wish some of these credulous young women, or credulous older women who have never been married, for that matter, might have just one such opportunity for judging a man on his true merits. They might not be so ready thereafter to speak of these fine, misunderstood husbands about whom actually they know nothing. It is all right for them to praise a man's looks, but it is rash presumption for them to attempt authoritative pronouncements on a man's disposition or his treatment of his wife. . . .

SUBSCRIBER.

"Sphinx" Defended.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: May a mere man rise to the defense of "Sphinx?" Your correspondent of April 22 who signed herself "Seventy—and Still Crying" did him very much of an injustice and I should like to voice my protest. In the first place, most people easily recognize the fact that even though the man may think it is he who sets the pace of romantic relationships, in reality it is the woman. Nine out of ten women set their caps for a given male—and Lord help the man! Once the campaign is started, it would take practically a miracle man to escape.

* * * *

But leaving out this angle, is not the woman as much responsible as the man in the matter of monopoly? Usually when a girl becomes the object of attentions from an attractive and eligible man—even though she may not care for him and does not intend to at any future time—she will hang on, encourage him, play up to him, until a better number happens along. In most cases if anyone is hurt it is the man, and not the woman. By the very nature of man, by his inherent vanity, he does not go around publicizing his broken heart. Rather, he feigns indifference, but the wound is none the less painful.

* * * *

After all, this is pretty much of a 50-50 world now. So don't blame "Sphinx" if he is in favor of monopoly without marriage in the offing. Pity him instead. He stands to be hurt far more than the girl. He'll find out. Anyway, "Seventy—and Still Crying" is a doddering sentimentalist. Sincerely, R. V.

"C. W. F." Applauded.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I should like to know a man who can and does write such a letter as that signed "C. W. F." in your column of April 24. His letter, addressed to a heartsick 22-year-old girl, sympathizing with her heartbreak and telling her how to deal with it, tells a great deal about the man himself. I realize my request is unconventional, but when one is middle-aged, or nearly so, conventions no longer seem so very important, do you think?

* * * *

I am not trying to find a husband, which, I believe, is supposed always to be the woman's ulterior motive when she makes a bid for the friendship of any man. But I feel that "C. W. F." might enjoy my garden and my trees and the countryside I live in, and I like to have for friends persons who enjoy the things which I enjoy. I love my home and I have work which I love and I meet many persons casually, but not very many who are genuinely sympathetic to my sincere love of the out-of-doors and the balm which nature brings. Sincerely, NATURE LOVER.

Embroidered Daisies on Black Gown

APPLIQUED FLOWERS on tulle or net, a Paris-inspired idea, is one of the newest and smartest additions to the world of fashion. The lovely gown pictured is made of black net with clusters of daisies incrusted at wide intervals. The separate cape of plain black tulle, is full and dips at the back —a bow and long tie finishes the neckline. A distinctive and conservative ensemble for important summer festivals. For information as to where this gown can be purchased, call The Post Fashion Editor, National 4200, Extension 323.

Bright, Ornamental Beads Retain Style

Ornaments with bright colored beads in plastic materials maintain their style prestige. However, there is a definite tendency toward continuing the use of plain plastics which are often cut or engraved. A great number of models show a clever combination with gold, especially when destined to be worn on plain or fancy backgrounds of black or navy blue. This combination is noticeable in buckles and clips as well as in fancy necklaces, bracelets, rings, and earrings. Sourdillat, the Parisian fancy jewel and accessory specialist, is displaying a whole collection of these ornaments.

Today's Mother Needs Fling At Being Herself, Rather Than Lickspittle of Youth

By Malvina Lindsay

THE APPROACH of Mother's Day suggests the thought that the greatest need of mothers just now is not carnations nor candy but a little of the emancipation that psychologists are demanding so loudly for children.

In the last couple of decades mothers' rights have been dwindling. First, the cult of the child came in and all family life, particularly that of the mother, was subordinated to Junior's naps, his diet, his self-expression. Second, the youth-must-be-served movement swept the world and all mothers with a tendency to self- effacement faded further into the background. So strong has been the movement to put parents in their place that many of them still feel that they must repair to the cellar to utter a conventional opinion.

* * * *

FATHERS have suffered from these restrictions far less than mothers. Being men, and hence elusive, they have gone their own way unobserved. But mothers have been cast into molds whether they would or not. They have been Mrs. Grundys, Queen Victorias, Old Ladies from Dubuque, "Silver Cord" neurotics and tyrannical matriarchs. And then annually for one Sunday in May they have turned into quaint, sweet-faced old ladies and been smothered with flowers and sentiment.

No one will dispute the appropriateness of saying mothers some kind of concrete tribute Sunday. But tribute to motherhood is not enough. The really great gift to mothers would be to free them and let them go just as they are being urged to let their children go. The really great tribute would be to give them a chance to be themselves—to be tories without being argued with, to be old fogies in their opinions without being ridiculed, to live alone without being nagged, to go out into the rain without being scolded.

* * * *

AN OLD MAN may glory in his years, but rarely does an old woman. She doesn't want to be bossed by over-solicitous relatives; she doesn't want to be set apart from the crowd, or to be patronized by smug and insouciant youth. She wants to be treated as an individual, not as a type; as a personality, not as a symbol.

Certainly no one wants to return to the bossy matriarchal period of American life. It was good for mothers that youth should have loosened itself from the apron strngs. But now mothers and grandmothers should have their fling at wider self-expression. Seasoned by years, enriched by experience, these women have much to contribute to the world. They should be liberated from youth's selfish demands and petty tyrannies to live more expansively. They should be given—not pats on the back and poems—but more recognition in the world as individuals.

Dog Paddle Called First Swim Stroke

The dog paddle, such as children adopt when left to themselves to learn to swim, was probably the first swimming stroke, says J. W. McVicar, dircetor of physical activities at the Central Y. M. C. A. in Toronto, Canada, in the current issue of the Research Quarterly. Next in the evolution of swimming, he says, came the breast stroke, in imitation of the frog.

So popular was this stroke that in 1865 in London a machine was invented upon which a person could spread himself in the breast-swimming position, placing his hands and feet into loops mechanically arranged on plates so that when the swimmer moved his hands and feet they were guided into the proper movements.

Until the latter part of the nineteenth century the breast stroke prevailed as the racing stroke. Then the side stroke was adopted for races, followed by the overarm stroke. The trudgeon, first cousin to the crawl, came next. This stroke was named after John Trudgeon, who learned it on a trip to South America.

Things That Make Women More Beautiful

Sunburn Lotion Protects Skin From Drying Winds.

The Mignon who writes this column does not manufacture, sell or indorse any of the products mentioned.

By Mignon.

THERE is nothing so hard on complexion as wind, especially if it is combined with the dirt of a big city. It does not make any difference what the season is if you are trying to protect your skin from the elements, a sunburn lotion (if it is a good one) is as fine a thing as you can use.

I would say that the best time to use the lotion that I am talking about now is right after you have cleaned and cold-creamed your face and just before you put on your foundation cream, which holds your makeup. The cream keeps the skin soft. Then the sunburn lotion, without drying the skin in the least, protects it against the winds, sun or cold. The foundation cream keeps your makeup out of your pores. It is all a matter of good, plain, common sense, this complexion business.

After trying this sunburn lotion, which is a white liquid in a white bottle, I was amazed at how much protection it really did give. If you use it in the summer on the beach it also helps to keep away freckles in case you object to them.

If you want to know where you can purchase any article mentioned in this column telephone The Washington Post, National 4200, Branch 323.

Stenogs to Study Golf and Tennis

Chicago (AP).—Chicago stenographers are going to have a golf and tennis school of their own, so they can keep up with the boss who knocks off work for a game on these balmy afternoons.

The recreation department of the Chicago park district has announced late afternoon classes for girl office workers—tennis at 10 cents a lesson and six golf lessons for $1.

Yellow Soap Is Ideal Cure For Poison Ivy

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

"Take care! That's poison ivy! Don't brush against it!"

Of all the dangers and discomforts of the summer months, the attacks of poison ivy which some member of the family is sure to have is one of the worst, both for the sufferer and those about him.

The innocent looking cause of this widespread perennial agony is found everywhere. And it is so well disguised by its very inconspicuousness that one often does not even know when he has been in the midst of it. To keep children out of it is impossible.

Some are immune to it for part if not all the time. Some can be protected by inoculation, but most people are less fortunate. Often a child who has never before been poisoned, will for some reason lose his immunity.

It is never safe to trust to precedent with poison ivy, and precautions should be taken even by those who feel certain that they are immune.

The best treatment for anyone who is aware of having gotten into poison ivy, is strong yellow soap, a scrubbing brush and plenty of water.

The hot and perspiring little child who has touched the vine should be undressed immediately, put into a tub of water, and scrubbed all over with strong yellow soap suds. Then, after being rinsed clean, he should be dressed in fresh clothes. Prompt action is essential.

Poison ivy can be spread easily, but thorough cleansing of both clothes and person helps to avoid this danger. If the disease is permitted to continue unchecked and uncared for, it may prove a very serious matter.

SUBSTITUTE SWEETHEART

By Priscilla Wayne

CHAPTER THIRTY-THREE.

LIFE in the sheltered, hideaway cabin in the Rocky mountains, was a nightmare to Jerry.

In the morning Pascoe came out to him and took away the handcuffs and anklets. "Get up," he commanded.

Jerry obeyed. Moving was an agony because of the stiffness of his legs and back. Sleeping on the ground through the storm and exposure had given Jerry a cold. His limbs ached, and his throat was parched and sore.

"I don't know why they brought you along," Pascoe grumbled, "but now that you're here, believe me, you're going to earn your board and keep."

"And watch your step. We're armed here. There are three of us against one. We'll have to let you be up and around or you can't work. But don't try to get away.

"We could catch you before you'd gone 100 yards and after that, believe me, we wouldn't make it easy for you. We haven't any too many supplies here, and I, for one, would just as soon not have four mouths to eat up what we have. So look careful, young feller."

Breakfast was not a very appetizing affair. The pancakes were soggy and lifeless, fried in rancid lard that had been packed away in a can. There was canned meat and coffee of sorts, made a degree more palatable by canned milk and sugar.

"I thought you bragged about how well fixed we'd be up here," Clara Bradley railed.

Soggy Pancake.

She threw a soggy pancake toward the stove. "If you can't do better than that," she told Jerry, "then, so far as I'm concerned, Pascoe can carry out any of his little plans he has for you."

"Shut up, Clara," Joseph Bradley demanded. "You'd growl and grumble at your own funeral. I'll admit this grub isn't very much. I'll admit it's even vile, but beggars shouldn't be choosers. We're here, and it's all we've got. You'll put up with it, and quietly, or I'll know the reason why."

"Oh, yeah!" Clara's voice was coarse, vulgar. It was hard for Jerry to realize that this naggard old woman was really the rather handsome, well-poised, well-dressed woman who had hired him back in Chicago. "Well, make me!"

Pascoe put back his chair. Rose abruptly. "Well, I'll tell you one thing. You're going to shut up, both of you. If we've got to live here we're going to do it as peaceably as possible. I won't stand for you to be at each other's throat all the time. I'll tell you that."

And as though, for him at least, the subject was over along with the vile breakfast, he walked out of the cabin.

Joseph Bradley lighted his pipe. "Get your little henchman started at his housework," he sneered. "Hadn't he better do up the sleeping quarters first?"

Aching in every limb, but obedient of necessity because of the revolver Joseph Bradley laid upon the table within his own reach, Jerry went to work.

The hours were leaden.

Jerry made up the bunks, washed the few cups and plates and pans, swept the cabin.

Pascoe and Clara were almost wild with nervousness. Clara lay down on her bunk, tried to go to sleep. Then she sat up and put cold cream on her face.

The hours of the seemingly never-ending day dragged on.

Night!

Night. Jerry, again safely secured from running away, was given the luxury of sleeping wrapped in a blanket on the floor of the cabin.

Morning brought the same ugly, cheerless regime. The same loathsome food, the same petty bickerings, grown sharper now and uglier.

On the morning of the third day Pascoe, cigaretless now for almost 24 hours was desperate. "I'm going out and get some," he declared. He had tried, unsuccesfully, to smoke Joe's tobacco rolled in news and wrapping paper.

Joseph Bradley tried to dissuade him. "Take my advice and lay low."

"Don't listen to him, Pascoe," Clara said angrily. "He's got tobacco. He's satisfied. He can tell us to lay low."

But Pascoe decided to risk going after the tobacco. "And a beefsteak," he said. "I'd die if I ate another mouthful of that canned junk."

All day, after Pascoe left, Jerry worked, making never a suspicious move, trying to act as much like an automaton as possbile. He was glad that sleeping inside had kept his cold from getting worse, glad that he'd got some rest, that would give him strength to carry through his desperate plan.

That revolver lay always on the table within reach of Bradley's hand. Jerry had passed it, sweeping or carrying water many times. Today he continued his routine, moving slowly about his work, keeping alert always and watching his chance.

Now that Pascoe had gone, he felt he would have to act. Opportunity to escape might never again knock so strongly.

The real opportunity came in the late afternoon.

Bradley sat in the chair he occupied two-thirds of his waking time, the revolver close to his hand. But Bradley was getting tired, too. He had always considered himself a man of iron nerves, but he was deciding that three more interminable days such as the ones just passed would break the iron nerve of any man.

This cabin was, just as Clara said, an abomination. Life, lived like this, even if they had supplies to keep it up indefinitely, just wasn't worth living.

Surely the hue and cry of their escape had died down now. Surely, using some degree of caution, they could venture away from this place.

He was thinking deeply. His pipe was held motionless in his hands. His eyes were almost unseeing as he tried to think through a safe means of escaping from this place, maybe of getting clear out of the country, of making a complete getaway—

Jerry's Chance.

That one minute of intense mental absorption had been Bradley's undoing.

With a catlike leap born of determination, desperation and his own agile youth, Jerry cleared the space from the stove to the table, his hand clutched the revolver and he sprang back just as Joseph Bradley whirled around.

"You dirty little double-crossing —— devil." Joseph Bradley screamed.

Jerry's nervous fingers touched the trigger and the revolver went off with a terrific roar.

Joseph Bradley leaped back. The bullet missed him, whizzed past and settled in a log just back of his head.

But the sound had unnerved Bradley, now far from being an iron man. He fairly sobbed in his sudden fright. "Please don't shoot again. We can talk this thing over. Surely we can come to some understanding."

Jerry had regained his nerve. He stepped back so that the pointed revolver covered both Joseph Bradley and Clara, now stumbling excitedly from her bunk.

Jelly-Making Season Nears; Hints Offered

Strawberry Time Brings Thoughts of Preserves to Housewives.

By Dorothea Duncan.

REQUESTS from readers for jelly recipes and reports that the strawberry patches of the Eastern Shores of Virginia and Maryland are ready to yield their yearly supply of luscious ripe berries to the Washington markets bring the realization that preserving time is at hand.

If the cool weather prevails for another week, jelly-making will not be the usual wearisome task, and you may be induced to fill up several more of the pantry shelves with toothsome delicacies, with the supply of fruit on hand rather than wait until the summer fruits come into the market.

D. DUNCAN.

Strawberries are the first on our preserving list, of course. Winter breakfasts would be a sorry affair if there were no strawberry preserves or jam to complement hot muffins and biscuits. But there are other fruits on the market right now that will make delicious jellies, conserves or marmalade. Rhubarb and fresh pineapple, of course! And oranges, lemons, raisins and nuts may be combined with either of these two fruits to make a confection that will be popular next winter as a sandwich spread.

If you want to make your preserving as simple and as untiring as possible, prepare just a small amount of the fruit at a time. Authorities on jelly making say that this is the easiest way to success. Be sure, too, when cooking preserves or jelly, that your kettle is large enough, at least three times the capacity of the fruit it is to hold.

The following recipes are recommended for use right now.

Strawberry Jam.

¾ pound sugar to 1 pound hulled berries

Pick over the berries and remove the hulls. Put the fruit on the fire alone, mashing it as it heats; a wooden potato masher is best for the purpose. Bring the fruit to a boil, stirring almost constantly and crushing any berries that may remain whole. Add the sugar to the fruit and boil together until thick (not over 20 minutes), stirring well to prevent burning. Pack in clean hot jars and seal.

Strawberry and Apple Jelly.

½ cup apple juice
2-3 cup sugar
½ cup strawberry juice

Do not cook more than two quarts of jelly at the same time for good results.

Measure the juice and boil it rapidly for five minutes, skimming it if necessary. Add the sugar and stir the juice until the sugar is dissolved. Heating the sugar seems to save no time, nor does it seem to improve the quality of the jelly. Cook the juice very rapidly, to obtain a bright, clear product; long, slow cooking gives a dull, dark jelly of inferior texture.

To test the jelly, take up a small amount of the juice in a spoon and allow it to drop from the side of the spoon. When the drops flow together and sheet from the spoon, the jelly is done and should be removed from the heat at once.

Pack in clean, hot jars and seal.

Apple and Rhubarb Jelly.

½ cup apple juice
½ cup rhubarb juice
2-3 cup sugar

Make by directions for apple and strawberry jelly.

Rhubarb Marmalade.

Rhubarb for marmalade should be young and fresh. Cut it into inch lengths without peeling. Weigh it. Allow three-fourths pound of sugar to every pound of rhubarb. Place the sugar and rhubarb in a preserving kettle, heat it very slowly and boil until thick and clear. Pack in clean, hot jars and seal.

Pineapple and Rhubarb Conserve.

1 quart shredded pineapple
4 quarts rhubarb
2 oranges
3½ quarts sugar
1 cup nut meats

Cook the pineapple in a covered kettle, with a small amount of water, until tender. Add the rhubarb, juice and grated rind of the oranges, and the sugar, and cook until thick. Add the chopped nuts and seal in clean hot jars. This makes an excellent filling for sandwiches.

Pineapple Conserve.

1 quart pineapple pulp and juice
2 oranges
1 lemon
3 cups sugar

Pare the pineapples and put them through food chopper. Steam until tender. Add the sugar, grated rind and pulp of the oranges and lemons and cook the mixture rapidly until it is thick. Pour into clean hot glasses and seal.

New Seals and Labels for Jelly Jars

A device that is as simple as it is effective is the seal pictured above which is made of a circular piece of cellulose film. Housewives are finding these tops, which come in a little envelop which includes the necessary number of rubber bands for securing the seals and gummed labels for marking the jar contents, the perfect final capping for paraffin-topped jelly jars. Leftovers in small jars, too, will stay sanitary in the ice box when sealed up and fastened with the rubber band as illustrated.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Tuberculosis—Early Detection.

While the death rate from tuberculosis per 100,000 of population in the United States has dropped in the last 35 years to one-third its former level, the situation is far from satisfactory. The reason is that the disease continues to take approximately its aforetime toll of those in the productive period of life, particularly men after the age of 20. The loss among the young adult population challenges the efficiency of our anti-tuberculosis campaign.

Many years ago it was established that tuberculosis is a curable disease. But with the passing of time, every one recognized that prevention was of greater importance. There are so many means readily at hand for detecting the disease that there would seem to be no excuse for the existence of hidden or sleeping cases. Furthermore, the methods of diagnosis are standardized throughout the scientific world, and any properly trained physician can make an accurate investigation. This being true, physical inventories should be resorted to far more frequently.

Tuberculin Test Harmless.

The tuberculin test, particularly that form developed by Mantoux in 1908, is entirely harmless. If this test reacts "positive" it means that the individual has been exposed to some one who is eliminating or giving off tubercle bacilli. This in turn may lead to a search for an infected person with whom the patient has come into contact and thus other cases will be disclosed, either in the immediate family or among those with whom he has associated.

It should be understood that a positive tuberculin test is merely a straw showing the direction of the wind. It is not by any means a final verdict. At one time it was thought that a reaction to the test indicated that the individual was protected and would not later show acute manifestations of the disease. Accurate observation, however, indicates that young persons who react positively are much more likely to exhibit the infection later than those who react negatively. Furthermore, activity will usually develop before they reach young manhood or womanhood.

The next step in the examination of a suspected case involves a careful X-ray study of the lungs. While the plates may not reveal tiny areas of early infection, yet if the plan is repeated at intervals of from two to three months, the percentage of accurate diagnoses will be considerably increased.

Sputum, of course, should be tested, and the lungs themselves receive a thorough going over. As a rule, it is wise to keep a positive tuberculin reactor under observation for a year or more.

1 can pears
1 can raspberries
Lemon juice

Drain all the fruit. Cut the pears in halves or thirds and place a layer of them in the freezing tray of refrigerator; on top of them place a layer of pineapple cut in small sections, and last the raspberries. Combine the three fruit juices, adding some red color paste for a brighter color. Pour these juices over the fruit to fill the tray. Freeze and serve cut in cubes.

This is successful only when made with canned fruits; the syrup which they are in prevents the hard freezing of the fruit.

'Electric' Dinner For Church-Goers

Chicken, Sweet Potatoes and Vegetables on Menu.

Here is a dinner that will solve the Sunday cooking problem for the Sunday church-goer who is lucky enough to own an electric range with both temperature control and automatic switch that will cut off the heat when the meal is cooked.

The menu reads like this: roast chicken, candied sweet potatoes, fresh peas and carrots and apple crunch.

Dress, clean, stuff and truss the chicken. Brush with melted butter and place in a shallow uncovered roasting pan. Parboil sweet potatoes and remove skins. Then arrange in shallow baking pan; pour over some brown sugar sirup and dot with butter. Place peas and carrots (sliced) in a casserole and add one-half cup water; covering. Prepare apple pie.

Place cold food in oven; the chicken and sweet potatoes on the lower shelf and the apple crunch and vegetables on the upper shelf. Set temperature control for 375 degrees F. Turn switch to bake. Set timer clock for a cooking period of one-half to two hours, the exact time depending upon the size of the chicken.

Go to church, come home and enjoy a "miracle" Sunday dinner.

CONSTIPATION* MAY LOWER RESISTANCE TO GERMS

Can Be Corrected by Natural Laxative Food

Common constipation is due largely to insufficient "bulk" in meals. It is a condition that should never be treated casually.

Long neglected, it may contribute to a general run-down condition. Your body lacks the strength it needs to fight off infection. You are much more likely to pick up a serious illness.

Guard against common constipation.* Make sure the meals you eat contain plenty of "bulk." Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is a generous source of effective "bulk."

Within the body, the "bulk" in ALL-BRAN absorbs moisture, forms a soft mass, and gently cleanses the system. This delicious cereal also furnishes vitamin B and contains iron.

Two tablespoonfuls daily, with milk or cream, are usually sufficient. Stubborn cases may require ALL-BRAN oftener. If not relieved this way, consult your doctor.

Serve ALL-BRAN in some form each day, either as a cereal, or cooked into muffins, breads, etc. Eat it regularly for regular habits.

Hostesses Use Special Form In Garden Party

Invitations Should Specify That Affair Is to Be Out-of-Doors.

By Margaret Wallace.

Garden party manners are very much in evidence this time of year in Washington.

While it is not necessary to state that a tea or reception is to be in the garden on either a formal or informal invitation, many wise hostesses do so. The type of costume worn at a garden party may differ somewhat from the type worn when the guests expect to be entertained indoors. Women guests in garden party costumes with garden party hats add much to the picturesqueness of the garden party and therefore to its success.

Whether the invitation be a formal engraved one or a written informal one on note paper or a visiting card, the words "In the Garden" or "Garden Party" can be added with propriety.

The invitation list for a garden party has to be as carefully considered as for an indoor function. In fact the wise hostess will remember that she cannot have any control over the elements and will have to have room enough in her drawing room and other receptions rooms to make her guests comfortable in case of a sudden storm or if the weather is rainy at the approach of the hour named for the party. While White House or embassy or legation garden parties are often postponed to the next day in case of rain, the private hostess cannot expect people to re-organize their engagement lists to that extent.

If tea is served it is usual to have it on the verandas or under shelter of some kind on the lawns. It is also good form to serve it in the dining room. Many hostesses prefer the latter method because it eliminates the necessity of bringing in the tea and refreshment tables in case of rain. It also gives the guests a pleasant place to congregate if it rains. Usually when tea and refreshments are served in the dining room at a garden party the guests are served or help themselves and then go out on the verandas, or on the lawn. It is a very good idea to have chairs and small tables scattered about.

Query—My house is quite small, but I have a very pleasant garden. I also have large verandas. I would like to give a tea for my daughter. It would be possible to dance on the verandas. I have storm curtains for the verandas. What should I serve for tea? Should I say "dancing" on the invitation?

Answer—On a warm day you can serve hot or cold tea or both. Other cold beverages are also proper. You should have plenty of small sandwiches and cakes. You can also serve ice cream or sherbet. The word "dancing" should be at the lower left-hand corner of an engraved invitation to a formal function, or written in the lower left-hand corner on a visiting card invitation to an informal function. If the invitation is a very informal one, written on note paper you can mention that there will be dancing.

Query—I wish to give a picnic supper in the garden. How do I invite the guests? They are all close friends and the party is to be most informal. Will it be proper to have box luncheons, or should I have a supper table and let the guests help themselves?

Answer—You invite the guests by writing them notes, over the telephone, or verbally, if you see them in time. This is correct because you state your picnic is to be a very informal one, as picnics always are. You can use your own discretion as to the use of box luncheons or a picnic supper table. If possible have folding chairs for the guests to sit on when they eat their picnic supper.

Query—Is it necessary to answer an invitation to a White House reception or dinner?

Answer—All dinner invitations must be answered. If the invitation to a reception does not say r. s. v. p. or "Please Reply" it is not necessary to answer it. If you do not attend you should leave cards at the White House. An invitation of any kind to the White House is considered a "command" and must be accepted unless there is a very good reason not to. White House invitations frequently include a card directing that replies be sent to the Chief of Protocol of the State Department.

Only Man in Cake Test Wins Prize

WOMEN have been defeated again, but this time in their own field and by the only male competitor, too. It all happened at the party of the People's Chorus of New York, which was held in honor of the organization's twentieth birthday, on May Day at the home of Mrs. John Henry Hammond.

Each member of the chorus was invited to come to the party and to bring a cake for the contest. The cake was not to be an ordinary cake, for it had to be representative enough of something musical to be worthy of a musical name.

The judges for the contest were Mrs. Hammond, Mrs. Pierre Cartier, Mrs. Walter Ewing Hope, Martha Deane, radio star, and Rita Halle Kleeman, author of a life of Mrs. James Roosevelt, "Gracious Lady," which Mrs. Roosevelt gave as a prize.

Only Male Is Winner.

There were so many cleverly decorated and delicious cakes that it would be impossible to describe them all. But the winning cake, of all things, was baked by the only man in the contest, Alfred Canova. He had made a chocolate sponge cake with fudge fruit filling and called it "The Chocolate Soldier."

Other prizes were: Second prize, Miss Hildegard Reuss, for her "Old Oaken Bucket" cake with the chocolate well and bucket on top; third prize, Miss Wilma Baer, for her cake "If Any Little Word of Ours," which was made in the shape of a note of music and had a piano and pianist set on top; fourth prize, Miss Grace Graves, for her "On Wings of Song", a cake which had been hollowed out to contain a small music box;

Civic Chorus Members.

All the persons who entered this contest were members of a civic chorus opens to men and women from all walks of life, who come to the weekly singing meetings the year around to get musical education and inspiration, under the competent leadership of Lorenzo Camilieri, who founded the People's Chorus of New York 20 years ago and which is celebrating, with a spring song festival at the Waldorf-Astoria, its twentieth anniversary.

At the party Mr. Camilieri was presented with a pair of gold cuff-links as a gift from the chorus in appreciation of his inspiring leadership.

And now for the prize-winning recipe. Mr. Canova, who is first tenor in the chorus, is no chef by trade, but an insurance salesman. In explanation of his cooking talents he merely says, "Well, I like to eat. When I was a little boy I used to hang around the kitchen and watch my mother cook. As time went on I learned to cook myself, and since I like cakes I learned to bake them—all kinds."

Chocolate Sponge Cake.

¾ cup cake flour
¼ cup cocoa
¼ teaspoon salt
4 eggs
1 cup sugar
4 teaspoons lemon juice

Sift the flour, measure it, add the cocoa and salt and sift again three times. Separate the whites and yolks of the eggs, and beat the yolks until they are thick and lemon-colored. Add the sugar gradually after it has been sifted and measured and beat again. Add the lemon juice and mix thoroughly. Fold in the flour mixture, alternately with the stiffly-beaten egg whites. (Be careful not to beat the cake at this stage.) Bake in a floured sheet or loaf tin in a slow oven (Sheet, 325 degrees F., 30 minutes; loaf, 300-325 degrees F., 40-60 minutes). For tube pan bake same as for loaf pan.

Fruit Fudge Filling.

2 cups sugar
1 or 2 squares unsweetened chocolate.
⅛ teaspoon cream tartar or 2 tablespoons corn sirup
2-3 cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 tablespoons butter

Mix the sugar, milk, grated chocolate, cream of tartar or corn sirup and boil rather slowly, stirring until the ingredients are well blended. Boil to the soft ball stage, (238 degrees F.). Remove from the stove, add the butter, but do not stir it in. When lukewarm, add the vanilla and beat until it creams; that is, until the shiny appearance disappears and the fudge will hold its shape when dropped from the spoon. Fold in just before spreading chopped nut meats, chopped citron and chopped candied pineapple.

Canned Food Mixtures To Be Awarded Prizes

Do you know how to get a quick cooking results by dressing up prepared foods? Can you, for example, prepare a delicious soup from the ingredients of two or three cans?

Certainly the modern woman has taken advantage of prepared products, but she does more than that. She uses her imagination and ingenuity in combining two or more of these canned or prepared foods to create new and interesting dishes that are quickly and easily made.

What are your favorite canned or prepared food combinations? The Post is asking for them next week. For the best recipes five cash awards will be offered. The first prize is $5; the second, $3; and the three remaining prizes, $1 each.

Write out your favorite combination of canned or prepared products, giving full details of your recipe. Send it to Dorothea Duncan in care of The Washington Post. Be sure to mail your entry in time to reach this office not later than next Saturday.

Cheese Hints.

Unless cheese is to be eaten the day of purchase, it is better to order it cut in one piece than sliced, for the slices will dry out very rapidly. To keep cheese moist cut in thick strips, place in a glass jar which is perfectly dry, snap or screw on cover and place in the refrigerator. Wrapping cheese in a vinegar-moistened cloth will also keep it fresh.

Leftover Egg Yolks Used in Many Ways

Leftover egg yolks may be kept for days frozen in the tray of an automatic refrigerator. When ready to use let them thaw. They may then be used in noodles, cake batters and other doughs.

If you wish to cook the egg yolks for garnishing purposes, drop them into simmering water, cook them under the boiling point until they are firm. Rice them and use them as a garnish for salads.

Leftover egg yolks may be used in any of the following dishes: Scrambled in tomato soup, scrambled, egg drops for soup, mayonnaise, hollandaise sauce, sponge cake, yellow loaf or layer cake, gold cup cakes, good layer cakes, yolk cookies, cup custard, custard filling, or sauces of various flavors.

Recipe Doubling Tip.

When doubling a recipe be careful with the seasoning. It is wise to add the amount required in the single recipe first and then taste and add more accordingly.

Measuring Fat.

Solid fat may be measured by submerging in water. If 1-3 cup of fat is desired, fill a cup 2-3 full of water, then submerge the fat until the water reaches the one cup mark. The water may then be poured off and the fat removed from the cup without sticking.

Cutting Parsley.

Kitchen scissors come in very handy, especially for cutting parsley that should be very fine. Pull the tufts from the stems. Gather the sprigs firmly in the left hand and cut them through repeatedly with the scissors until very fine.

School Plan Is Approved By Trustees

Education Board Backs Program to End Home Study.

Parents Indignant Over Criticism of Holmes' Experiment.

An experiment, which may lead to the elimination of home work from the academic burdens of boys and girls in Washington high schools, will go forward with the blessing of the Board of Education.

When the project, inaugurated at Anacostia Junior-Senior High School a week ago by Principal Chester W. Holmes, came to their attention yesterday afternoon, the school trustees sided unanimously with a delegation of parents and voted indorsement. For the next six weeks, until the end of the school term, Anacostia students will spend an extra half-hour in schools, but will be compensated by a supervised study plan, designed to give them few lessons to do outside of school.

Indignant over adverse comment on Holmes' plan, the parents' group, headed by J. Louis Gelbman, second vice president of the Anacostia Parent-Teacher Association, appeared at yesterday's board meeting.

"The parents think this is the finest experiment that has been made in our schools for a long time," said Gelbman. "We don't want our children sitting up evenings, doing work that would take them all night to complete.

Unanimous Vote.

"When this plan was brought before out P.-T. A. meeting we voted almost unanimously for it. Out of more than 100 members present, only one voted against it."

Holmes, it was reported, had consulted the parents group before going ahead with his experiment. He also had taken a vote of the students, the result of which, the board heard yesterday, was 395 to 106 in favor of the longer study periods at school.

Holmes, according to Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of Schools, had also consulted with school officials, including the superintendent and Dr. S. E. Kramer, assistant superintendent. Both approved.

Instead of 43-minute class periods, Anacostia School, for the duration of the experiment, will have 55-minute periods, part of which will be spent in study supervised by the teacher. School will begin at 8:30 a. m. instead of at 9 o'clock.

Acting on the recommendation of Dr. Ballou, the board yesterday again deferred action on Scholastic magazine, the school publication under fire on charges of publishing "subversive material" and of adhering to an "indoctrinating editorial policy."

No Action Planned Yet.

The teacher committee, headed by Dr. H. A. Smith, Central High School principal, will need at least three more weeks to consider the charges, Ballou reported.

This new delay was interpreted as further evidence that the board plans no action on the scholastic matter until Congress acts on the Sisson bill to repeal the "red rider."

With the retirement, effective April 30, of Miss Catherine Watkins, director of kindergartens, Divisions 1-9, that position is to be abolished, the board decided. Acting on the recommendation of its personnel committee, of which Robert A. Maurer is chairman, the board voted to transfer the responsibility for supervision and direction of kindergartens, to the office of the director of elementary school instruction.

Miss Ida May Lind, the elementary director, will have active supervision of kindergarten work for the rest of the school year. It is understood a teacher in the kindergarten ranks will be appointed to serve as her assistant next fall.

The board received the first of a series of reports on health and physical education in junior and senior high schools from Birch E. Bayh, head of that department, and another on playground development from Henry I. Quinn, board member, who also sits on the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Board Hears Citizens On City School Needs

Even Five-Year Building Program Is Inadequate, Speakers Tell Board of Education Hearing; Fries Presents Comprehensive Plan.

Citizens representing community, business men's and Parent-Teacher organizations, at a meeting last night in Franklin Administration Building once more reminded the Board of Education of the Washington school housing needs they deem most urgent.

The board was cautioned by several speakers that even its extensive five-year building program may be too conservative, if the "critical situation now existing in many schools" is to be relieved. Board members were urged to consider Washington's rapidly expanding population, and the real estate developments which in the residential districts is already bringing about enrollments far beyond the capacities of the present schools.

The requests, for the most part, were to meet sectional needs. Parent teacher associations and citizens' associations from every section of the city sent in requisitions for improvements to alleviate specific needs in their communities. However, there were groups, representing the District as a whole, which offered general programs designed to relieve the general school building situation.

Fries Spokesman.

Principal among these was the District of Columbia Public School Association, for which Gen. Amos A. Fries, president, was spokesman. Gen. Fries submitted a written statement outlining a sevenfold request. The Public School Association, he said, considered as most urgent: Addition of seven rooms to Roosevelt High School, an elementary school in East Washington Heights, demolition of the annex at Van Buren School, an annex for Ketcham School, a new junior high school in the northwest section, a new school center north of Pennsylvania avenue, south of Dupont Circle and west of Fifteenth street.

The school center, Gen. Fries said, was urgently needed to meet the community needs of adults as well as young people. He recommended that it be equipped to serve also as a vocational center.

While the inadequate pupil accommodations of schools in every section of the city was brought to the board's attention, the overcrowded conditions in the Northern section were pointed out by several vigorous speakers.

Raymond C. McGee, chairman of the education committee of Bunker Hill Parent-Teacher Association, said the housing condition there was so desperate, he was no longer "requesting" an improvement, but "demanding" it.

Nine Grades at School.

"We have a two-room school for nine grades," he said. "There are 700 children in the community. Only 107 can go to the Bunker Hill School. The rest must go to 'outside' schools. I have a neighbor who has three children; each goes to a different school."

The community of Bunker Hill, he said, wants an eight-room school with an auditorium. He said the estimated cost would be $190,000.

Mrs. G. H. Collingwood, president of the Macfarland Junior High School, P.-T. A., and the mother of six children in public schools, said the crowded condition in that school was "almost impossible." She pointed out that for the 1,400 children enrolled there was a library to accommodate 15. She urged a building expansion for the community.

Speaking for the Chevy Chase Citizens Association, George E. Dieffenbach made specific requests for the E. V. Brown, the Alice Deale and the new Woodrow Wilson schools.

"It is a question," he said, "whether the building program or the termites will get to the E. V. Brown School (in Chevy Chase) first. The termites are really serious there. We think it would be better to erect a new school than to make costly repairs."

New Wing Needed.

The Alice Deal School, to which a wing was added last year, now needs a second, Dieffenbach pointed out, and the citizens' association he represented "wants the stadium at Woodrow Wilson School completed as soon as possible."

A representative of the Van Buren School P.-T. A. pointed out the school building there is so old that it presents serious repair problems. He said the school needed new flooring and at least one clock."

"There isn't a clock in the whole school," he said. "Everyone depends on the principal's wrist watch."

The playground, too, is in poor condition and needs resurfacing, it was pointed out.

W. H. Youngman, representing the Citizens Association of Takoma, D. C., said "something had to be done to cut down the size of classes in schools of our district." He said that 40 and 45 pupils to the room was the rule.

"I'm for your building program," he continued, "but it's too conservative. The crowded conditions won't be any better when it's completed."

Replying to his statement, Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, said the building program was designed to make 35 or 36 pupils the maximum for each room.

A. F. Almes, of Shaw Junior High School, said his school needed auditorium repairs, and better gymnasium and lavatory facilities. He reminded his board that the building was abandoned as a senior high school several years ago, and had been put back into service because of the high enrollment in the community.

The board received numerous requests for auditoriums and assembly halls. P.-T. A. leaders protested the lack of room in several schools for meeting places. Many P.-T. A. groups must meet in school corridors, they said.

An enlargement of Community Center activities was also among the recommendations of many groups. The Southwest Civic Association wanted its Community Center, established two years ago, to be expanded to operate throughout the year.

Objects to Item.

Gen. Fries objected to the item in the board's building program calling for a new administration building "if it means depriving the needs of our children."

Mrs. Marion Wade Doyle, president of the board, as chairman of the meeting, replied that a new administration building, while a secondary need, was considered important to "a program that is looking ahead for five years."

In addition to the items calling for building additions, the board's program, Mrs. Doyle pointed out, called for 234 additional teachers, believed necessary to staff the enlarged system. The board, she assured the citizens' representatives, would do all in its power to have the whole building program included in the 1937-1938 budget, and made a plea for the co-operation of all the groups represented to work it out.

All the requests were turned over to the board in writing for later consideration.

Juvenile Court Measure Called Constitutional

A divergence of opinion over the constitutionality of the Norton juvenile court bill developed yesterday as a special sub-committee of the House District Committee heard Judge Fay Bentley and other witnesses.

Edward M. Welliver, assistant corporation counsel, raised the constitutional issue on the ground that children would be denied a jury trial.

Judge Julian W. Mack, of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals of New York, a former juvenile court judge, expressed the belief that the bill will not deprive anyone of constitutional rights. He pointed out that the change from a criminal to a chancery court, as proposed, would be beneficial to juvenile delinquents.

Earlier Judge Bentley and Welliver declared that additional probation officers are needed at the District Juvenile Court. They stated that seven of nine probation officers handle juvenile cases. Judge Bentley added that the two officers assigned to adult cases are responsible for an average of 500 persons.

Judge Bentley, who would administer the new law, said she is "wholeheartedly behind the effort" to modernize and humanize the procedure of her court. She indorsed the provision that would eliminate jury trials.

She pointed out that during the last 20 years there have not been more than 20 jury trials in the District Juvenile Court.

William A. Roberts, people's counsel, approved the bill in general but held that the jury trial provision should be made optional with the court. He asserted that the criminal court procedure of the present court is largely to blame for juvenile delinquency in Washington.

Negro Slugged, Robbed Of $5,000 in his Home

Ambrose Moore, 62, Negro, of 427 New York avenue northwest, was slugged and robbed of $5,000 by two other Negroes in his home early yesterday.

Police found Moore in a dazed condition. His bank book showed a withdrawal of $5,000 they said, leaving a balance of $2,900. He told police he drew out the money to invest with the men, but could not remember for what purpose. He said he did not know the men nor could he remember where he met them. The money consisted of five $1,000 bills.

Jewish Life Race's Need, Rabbi Avers

Washington Hebrew Congregation Temple Hears Dr. Franklin.

NoSolution to Problems, He Says, Pointing to World Feeling.

Hundreds packed the auditorium of the Washington Hebrew Congregation Temple last night to celebrate the eightieth anniversary of the congregation and to hear the Rev. Dr. Leo M. Franklin, of Detroit, discuss the problems of the Jewish race.

Services began at 8 o'clock and lasted for more than two hours in the main auditorium before the meeting adjourned to the vestry rooms for a reception and refreshments.

Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld opened the services with prayers from the Union Prayer Book, with interludes of music from the choir.

Then Jacob H. Gichner, president, welcomed members to the church to celebrate the anniversary. His address was followed by brief speeches from four leaders of Temple organizations.

Mrs. Fred Pelzman spoke for the Sisterhood; Allen V. de Ford, for the Brotherhood; Nancy Goldsmith, for the Young People's League, and Wallace Luchs, jr., for Pi Tau Pi.

"No Solution."

"There never has and never will be a solution of the Jewish problem," said Dr. Franklin, of Detroit's Temple Beth El. "We must live in the world and face it. The Jew must live a Jewish life in an American environment." Dr. Franklin's anniversary sermon subject was "The Dilemma of the Jew."

"The Jew cannot be understood," Dr. Franklin declared, "by a study of what he is. He may deny the pull of the past on his soul, but he yields to the pressure of that past. He may consciously try to break with his people, but the spiritual circle closes him in. He may ape others, but his personality remains that of a Jew. Outwardly, to use the borrowed phrase, he may be all things to all men, but he can't lie to his own soul.

"We Jews find ourselves in a peculiarly difficult position today. On the one hand, historical and psychological forces make it inevitable that we go on as Jews and yet the world rejects the Jew. He must live in a world that would rather be without him. And thus his dilemma becomes acute."

Can't Discard Background.

Dr. Franklin mentioned the fact that Jews frequently try to live "an artificial life" of modernism, rather than "one in consonance with the age-old ideals as a teacher of religion."

"Frequently," he pointed out, "the Jew is trying to discard the very characteristics he is made of—throw away his background. I tell you, it can't be done.

"The Jew is by nature a dreamer of dreams. He is an idealist—not the go-getter salesman he is so often portrayed. But today, some Jews are inclined to despise the dreamer in a practical world, pulling against his past and trying to do something he cannot do."

The solution of the Jew's problem as offered by Dr. Franklin is "throwing off the cloak of artificiality and ceasing to copy others and revert to the heritage of faith."

Every Jew should "give willingly and zealously to Palestine," the speaker said.

Dr. Abram Simon, rabbi of the congregation, introduces Dr. Franklin as "a leader of Jews in America—a man who probably had more influence on Jewish life in America than any other leader."

Preceding Dr. Franklin's address, these members of the choir, with Louis Atwater at the organ, rendered a hymn in memory of the late Rabbi Stern:

Mrs. Florence Sindell, Mrs. Flora Brylawski, George Myers, and John H. Manville.

Mad Mulcahy!

Mulcahy, the gander, is in the dog house, facing possible execution, and a fickle goose is the cause of it all.

Parks officials yesterday revealed Mulcahy had gone on a rampage at the Roaches Run wild fowl sanctuary, killing 10 newly hatched ducklings and devouring four of them. If the big Canada goose continues his depredations, they asserted, it may be necessary to destroy him.

Paul F. Hodge, caretaker, traced Mulcahy's maniacal despondency to the treachery of the culprit's bride, which eloped with another goose Wednesday in the dead of night. Before the marital triangle had its origin, Hodge pointed out, Mulcahy was not only a model husband but acted as foster father to many orphan ducklings.

Weather Balloon Rises 16 Miles To Send Back Data by Radio

An ascension 16 miles above the earth by a Bureau of Standards sounding balloon yesterday led Government experts to believe that weather forecasts may eventually be made as much as four days in advance.

Willis R. Gregg, Weather Bureau chief, said that a balloon carrying a small radio transmitter called a "radiometeorograph" automatically sent back data on temperature, pressure and humidity as it rose from Washington Airport.

Gregg said: "Today's experience with the sounding balloon soon may become an everyday practice which will greatly improve the accuracy of weather forecasts.

"It is within reason to hope that in the future we may be able to forecast weather conditions three or four days in advance of actual occurrence instead of from one and a half days as at present."

The upper air data obtained by such sounding balloons may make it possible to evacuate homes in advance of hurricanes and tornadoes which have frequently taken heavy toll of life because residents could not be warned promptly enough, it was said.

War Is Pledged On Democratic 'Carpet-Bagger'

Costello Warns on Effort to Follow Practice in Delegate Choice.

By Edward T. Folliard.

Having witnessed a controversy that split the local Republican organization into two factions, each of which will send delegates to the party's national convention in Cleveland, "voteless" Washington now awaits the primary election of the local Democrats.

There is turmoil in Democratic ranks, too. This was made clear when John F. Costello, Democratic national committeeman for this city, declared war on the "carpet-baggers."

Costello said recently that he understood that an attempt was to be made this time to elect a slate of "carpet-baggers" as delegates to the Philadelphia convention. He said he was ready to fight any such attempt.

There are Democrats here who would like to see Costello retired as Democratic national committeeman. He knows it, and has announced his readiness to fight for re-election if a fight is necessary.

Edward F. Colladay, Republican national committeeman for the District, yesterday issued a statement on some of the behind-the-scenes maneuvering that preceded the definite split in the local Republican organization Thursday night.

Colladay said that Leo A. Rover, head of the rival faction, proposed to him that Samuel J. Prescott, veteran Republican leader here, be elected as a compromise national committeeman, Colladay to go to Cleveland as a delegate.

The proposal, he explained, was subject to the approval of the Rover and Colladay groups. Colladay added:

"When my supporters, assembled in that convention, were informed that the proposal involved giving up all representation in the delegation to the national convention except one delegate out of three and no alternates, they unanimously rejected it and nsisted that the least they would approve was my re-election as national committeeman, coupled with the re-election of Mrs. (Virginia White) Speel as national committeewoman, the latter being included in the Rover offer."

This counter proposal was transmitted to the Rover group through William P. MacCracken. Later MacCracken told Colladay that it had been rejected. Meantime the Colladay group had adopted a resolution, reading as follows:

"Motion made and passed that Mr. Colladay is authorized in his discretion to accept the two members of the national committee; if this is not accepted immediately he is to insist upon Francis Wells for delegate to represent the colored people."

"Mr. MacCracken," Colladay said, "stated this was impossible. Negotiations ended there."

Geographic, Standards Bureau To Photograph Siberian Eclipse

14-Foot Camera Developed to Make Picture in Color of Sun's Corona; Joint Expedition Off to Remote Spot for June 19 Phenomenon.

The National Geographic Society and the National Bureau of Standards yesterday announced joint plans to photograph the sun's corona during a total eclipse at Ak Bulak, Soviet Russia, June 19.

The two scientific agencies have developed a huge camera equipped with a newly designed astrographic lens. The camera is 14 feet long, is painted battleship gray and resembles a giant cannon. It will take both black and white and color photographs.

In charge of the project will be Dr. Irvine C. Gardner, of the Bureau of Standards, designer of the new 9-inch lens. Both lens and camera were constructed at the Bureau of Standards.

Will Sail Sunday.

Dr. Gardner will be accompanied on the expedition by his wife, herself an experienced scientist and former member of the Bureau of Standards staff. They will sail from New York Sunday.

Ak Bulak, where they will construct their observation station, is in the Ural Mountains near Orenberg, Siberia. A joint expedition of Harvard University and Massachusetts Institute of Technology will observe the eclipse from the same site.

The National Geographic Society is co-operating with Georgetown University in another expedition to observe the same eclipse. This expedition, headed by Dr. Paul A. McNally, of Georgetown, is now on the way to its headquarters at Kustania, Siberia, about 370 miles northeast of Ak Bulak.

The lens developed by the Bureau of Standards and used in the expedition headed by Dr. Gardner is in two ways an improvement over previous equipment for photographing the sun's corona. It increases the speed of photography and greatly reduces the necessary focal length, or distance from lens to plate.

Since the mounting of the camera on a single rigid unit has permitted focusing and adjustments to be made before leaving, the time for preparation at the observation station will be greatly cut.

The lens works like a telephoto camera, photographing a distant object in more enlarged form than ordinarily possible. It will provide an image of the sun 2 inches in diameter on the photographic negatives. These can be enlarged to bring out considerable detail.

Photographs will reveal the shape, size and structure of the sun's corona, believed to hold clews of the composition of the sun itself. Dr. Gardner also will attempt to make color photographs of the corona, an attempt which has hitherto been only partially successful.

Commissioners Spurn Any New Traffic Rules

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen's anti-noise campaign fell into difficulties at a meeting of the Commissioners yesterday when his colleagues not only refused again to enact additional punitive traffic regulations, but one, Commissioner George E. Allen, suggested there are already too many police and traffic regulations.

Proposal of the anti-noise committee headed by William A. Van Duzer that blowing of horns on private vehicles for any reason whatever be prohibited during the hours from 11 p. m. until 7 a. m. was tabled indefinitely.

So, too, was Van Duzer's jaywalking regulation, under which pedestrians would have been liable to arrest if they crossed roadways except at intersections in accord with traffic signals.

This action was taken after newspaper reporters had been called into the board meeting and Commissioner Hazen had announced he desired to set at rest reports that the Commissioners were not fully behind the anti-noise campaign.

Commissioner Allen suggested that while Edward W. Thomas, assistant corporation counsel, was going over existing regulations to see what additional ones might be needed, he also be charged with the job of determining which existing regulations could be repealed.

Pre-Dated

Yesterday's heat forced the Police Department into an early official recognition of summer.

Civic Groups Seek to Save Alley Board

Launch Drive to Have Senate Restore Fund Lost in House.

Project Will Die June 30 if Efforts Fail; Work Not Completed.

Civic agencies launched a "Save the Alley Dwelling Authority" campaign yesterday as the House ignored the plight of the slum-clearance agency by reading the deficiency appropriations bill for amendment without restoring the $300,000 Budget Bureau estimate elminated by the House Appropriations Committee.

The only hope for restoration of the item now lies with the Senate, where several Senators are known to be sympathetic with the aims of the Alley Dwelling Authority. It is expected that a move to put back the appropriation will be started either in committee or on the floor.

The Washington Committee on Housing issued a statement asserting that the action of the House committee, if sustained by Congress, "would bring to an end one of the most important civic undertakings in the National Capital."

Sees Intent to Appropriate.

The committee stated it was confident the intention of Congress was to make annual appropriations to the Alley Dwelling Authority during the ten-year period contemplated by the organic act and not to limit it to the initial $500,000, as contended by Chairman Buchanan of the appropriations committee.

"In the year and a half of its existence," the committee on housing added, "the Alley Dwelling Authority has made a remarkable record of achievement, efficiency, and economy in administration."

John Ihlder, ADA administrator, in a statement said that the action of the Appropriations Committee "apparently is due in part to a misunderstanding and in part to the wording of the preamble of the act, which may be interpreted in two ways."

Wording Not Changed.

The act, as originally drawn, he recalled, provided for an appropriation of $3,000,000 to be used as a revolving fund until 1944. Later it was decided to make an initial authorization of only $500,000, but through an oversight the wording of the authorization was not changed.

As the bill now reads, he added, even what is left of the initial $500,000 will cease to be available to the Alley Dwelling Authority after June 30.

"Therefore the work will stop on that date," he said, "leaving unfinished projects and unliquidated obligations, and there will be no means of administering completed projects, now the property of the Alley Dwelling Authority.

Breakfast Planned By Catholic Group

Members of the Police and Firemen's Catholic Association of Washington will have a Mother's Day celebration all their own tomorrow, assisting at mass and receiving Communion at St. Patrick's Church and holding a special breakfast at the Willard.

Attired in uniform and wearing white gloves and red or white carnations, the police and firemen will meet at 7:30 a. m. at the Knights of Columbus Hall and march to St. Patrick's Church. After mass they will march to the hotel.

Several members of Congress will attend the breakfast. Harry S. Bell, president of the organization, will be in charge. The Rev. Ignatius Smith will be the guest speaker.

The Communion services will be broadcast over a Nation-wide hookup of the American Broadcasting Co. Bishop John M. McNamara will preach the sermon.

"THIRTEEN HOURS BY AIR." Paramount picturization of a story by Bogart Rogers and Frank Mitchell Dazey, adapted to the screen by Kenyon Nicholson, featuring Fred MacMurray and Joan Bennett, with ZaSu Pitts, Alan Baxter, Fred Keating, Brian Donlevy, John Howard, Adrienne Marden, Ruth Donnelly, Bennie Bartlett, Grace Bradley, Dean Jaggers, Jack Mulhall and Marie Prevost. Directed by Mitchell Leisen. Reviewed Friday afternoon.

BELL.

A surprising variety of things that might happen—but probably never did—on a 13-hour hop by air from New York to San Francisco constitute the comedy-adventure-romance-thrill content of this fast-moving and highly implausible bit of extravagantly amusing and exciting celluloid.

Beautiful young women attempting to head off a sister's elopement with the wrong man, jewelry thieves and hijackers, "G-men" masquerading as doctors, society parasites horning in on general principles, an offensively aggressive kid and his twittery governess and a few dozen air line operators, pilots, stewardesses, starters and whatnot combine to make up the diversified personnel of this eloquent argument on the side of traveling by rail!

Stops are made at the usual airfields across the Continent—Toledo, Chicago, Omaha, Salt Lake City, etc.—and at each some new addition is made to the list of participants in a cross-country chase that seems finally to have had a chummy little dinner for two in Frisco as its major raison d'etre. The chummy little dinner is shared by the beautiful blonde in the costly fur coat and the rugged pilot who guides the ship from Salt Lake into Frisco through a blizzard, a holdup by a bandit, the shooting of the doctor and the assistant pilot and a continuous barrage of deviltry on the part of Master Waldemar Pitts 3d.

Who's Who and Why?

It is all a little muddled in the matter of motivation and the inconsequentials of who is who and why, but the violent action is heavily sprinkled with laughs—provided principally by ZaSu Pitts, as the governess of the juvenile cyclone in the Eton suit and topper, and that obstreperous youngster, impersonated with diabolical skill by a lad named Bennie Bartlett; Ruth Donnelly, Fred MacMurray, head man at the controls, and Joan Bennett, the beautiful blonde, who really is beautiful.

Another item of fun consists of Mr. MacMurray's strict adherence to theory of the salt-water sailor that it is best to have a gal in every port. Jack Gordon, his character name, seems to be a blood relative of the gay dog played by John Litel on the stage and Jim Cagney on the screen in "Ceiling Zero."

A notable feature of the picture is its insistence upon showing imposing close-ups of some of the finest ships coursing the western skies. They loom as large as the biggest of the juggernauts of the clouds and give a comprehensive idea of the expansion commercial aviation has undergone.

In addition to those already named in these dispatches, Alan Baxter as the gun-toting bandit; John Howard as "Scotty," the assistant pilot; Adrienne Marden, as his favorite stewardess, and Jack Mulhall contribute effective bits. In one scene, even, Marie Prevost comes back to the wars in the brief role of an airfield waitress. And that's the way it goes—just one surprise after another!

Fio-Rito's Fine Revue.

On the stage at the Earle this week, Ted Fio-Rito, one of the more polished of the popular bandsmen, provides the entertainment with a thoroughly conventional, but melodious and musicianly revue that affords numerous specialists agreeable opportunities to parade their wares and the band itself to strengthen the fine impression it always has made over the air and on the screen.

Muzzy Marcellino, guitarist, pianist and singer; the Three Debutantes, harmony vocalists; Stanley Hickman, tenor, and that astonishing young man with the multiplicity of voices, who goes by the name of "Candy," are those who most effectively augment the orchestra's skillful instrumentalism. Fio-Rito himself takes frequent turns at the piano, scoring most decisively in his own arrangement of Sigmund Romberg's "Lover, Come Back to Me."

Of all its medleys—and it plays several—the orchestra showed to best advantage in the clever translation of "The Music Goes 'Round" into the idiom, in turn, of Guy Lombardo, Casa Loma, Wayne King, Hal Kemp and Whiteman. The best novelty number was "Who's Afraid of the Big Bad Wolf," elaborated from the five-bar musical theme of Walt Disney's classic, "Three Little Pigs."

An issue in the "Popular Science" series of natural color subjects, the Paramount News, featuring Maj. Brown, superintendent of police, in a plea for his Boys Clubs, Schmeling and Joe Louis in training and the end of the Ethiopian war, and Freddie Clark's orchestral interludes augment a bill on which the stage program and the screen seemed to run a dead heat yesterday for popular favtor.

"THESE THREE." United Artists picturization of the play of "The Children's Hour," by Lillian Hellman, adapted to the screen by the author, featuring Miriam Hopkins, Merle Oberon and Joel McCrea, with Catherine Doucet, Alma Kruger, Bonita Granville, Marcia Mae Jones, Margaret Hamilton and Walter Brennan. Directed by William Wyler. Previewed Tuesday, May 5.

In adapting her stage play of "The Children's Hour" to the screen, Lillian Hellman has eliminated the questionable theme upon which the original work was based and has substituted therefor a simple love story of triangular pattern, poignancy and power. In so doing she not only has made "These Three" a film play wholly acceptable to the tastes of the motion picture public, but actually has strengthened the dramatic structure of her widely discussed and eminently successful stage creation.

Whereas "The Children's Hour" depicted the wrecking of several adult careers by the pernicious prattling of a warped juvenile mind that imputed sinister perversions to her immediate superiors in a school for young girls, the pictured version is content to base the sum total of its climacteric disclosures upon suggestions of far less evil import. The sadistic nature of the abnormal child, who derives a peculiar exultation from inflicting mental anguish upon those about her, remains virtually unaltered—Mary Tilford is still an unconscionable little liar with a magnificent talent for malicious innuendo, imaginative character assassination and the simulation of personal persecution.

Scandal Reared on Falsehood.

In the play's celluloid version, her charges are based upon an eavesdropper's impression of a late night visit of Dr. Cardin to the rooms of one of the joint principals of the girls' school. Although the call is wholly justified by circumstances and entirely innocent and unpremeditated in purpose, it is made to seem quite the opposite. Upon this flimsy foundation of error is built up a structure of lies that finally brings their dreams tumbling down about the heads of the two young women who have struggled so valiantly to hew a career of social worth out of conditions of utmost difficulty.

The rich and socially eminent Mrs. Telford withdraws her precious grandchild from the school Martha and Karen have labored so diligently to establish, and induces all of her friends to pursue the same course. It is not until after the wreckage is complete that Martha comes into possession of the evidence that would have won the libel suit for her and Karen. Confronting Mrs. Telford with this damning evidence of her granddaughter's deliberate campaign of terrorism for all with whom she came in contact, the irreparable wrong is laid bare—but not until Martha's future has undergone a bitter and total demolition.

Such is the basic narrative upon which "These Three" is grounded. It is not, however, as might be imagined, a completely grim and forbidding tale of defeatism and disillusionment. Interwoven with its more severe indictments are intervals of humorous by-play and in characterization, too, it provides occasional comic relief from the drab revelations of its major theme.

Has Humorous Aspects.

In the rebuilding of the dilapidated old house in which the girls were to establish their school, in the absence of any more lucrative means of earning a livelihood, and in their meeting with the young and handsome Dr. Cardin, the masculine interest in the romance, during this expansive project, there is fun; in the fashioning of the character of Mrs. Mortar, an actress "temporarily at leisure," and the droll limning of the village taxi driver, the author has sought and found further relief from the tense movement of her primary premise.

The piece is acted with almost flawless skill by the adult members of the cast, but their work, superlatively excellent as it is, is fairly and unmistakably overshadowed by the impersonation of the two young girls, who cause all the trouble by youthful actresses of unusual endowment. Miriam Hopkins, as the luckless half of the feminine partnership, is vastly moving in the play's most sympathetic role. Merle Oberon, as the one successful in the outcome of her grand passion, brings to the screen the best and most natural work she has done for the cinema and Joel McCrea portrays the role of the doctor with unaffected vigor and charm. Alma Kruger is the too tolerant grandmother and Catherine Doucet the gushing stage star, who fritters away three reputations in the careful nurturing of her own self-centered egotism. Walter Brennan is the quaint taximan with the quainter taxi.

Two Who Shine.

The two prodigious youngsters who carry the action to such heights of dramatic interest are Bonita Granville, the mainspring of the plot's devilish ingenuity, and Marcia Mae Jones, as Rosalie, browbeaten and fearful victim of her superior genius for evil. These two, by all odds, are the most amazing of the screen's child actresses. The one brilliantly exultant moment the film affords is when Margaret Hamilton, as Mrs. Telford's straight-seeing maid, slaps Miss Granville's face with a resounding whack that could be heard for miles! The audience practically cheers this inspired act!

"Just Plain Folks," a two-reel Tuxedo comedy; Walt Disney's Mickey Mouse cartoon comedy, "Mickey's Grand Opera," and a new issue of the Metrotone News supplement a feature that should enlist the enthusiastic interest of all lovers of camera-drama at its best.

Watching Their Ship Come In!

Loew's Fox

"BIG BROWN EYES." Paramount picturization of stories by James Edward Grant, adapted to the screen by Raoul Walsh and Bert Hanlon, featuring Joan Bennett, Cary Grant and Walter Pidgeon, with Lloyd Nolan, Alan Baxter, Marjorie Gateson and Isabel Jewel. Directed by Raoul Walsh. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Dorothea Lewis.

If the title doesn't warn you, we will; this is a silly picture.

The difficulty seems to be that the director and co-adapter, Raoul Walsh, couldn't decide from just what angle to approach the opus. Should it be comedy? Should it be a thriller? Should it be serious? Should it have its tongue in its cheek? Should it crusade? And apparently on the theory of the more angles the merrier, he tried to make it all!

As it now stands—and falls—it's pretty hard to tell much about it, since it is coy as to identities and motives and such.

There is a blonde manicurist (with, we assume, big brown eyes, though nothing is said about them), and a brunette cop and they love each other. There is a horribly flighty lady who owns a dog and some diamonds. There is a fake private detective. There are assorted gangsters, grades A, B, C and D.

Find Those Diamonds!

The lady loses the diamonds. The cop tries to find them and so does the pseudo-detective. The manicurist becomes a reporter and helps, becomes a manicurist again and helps some more. There are several murders, a trial, and, at long last, a denouement, no less.

There are, in all this, two really good moments—the manicurist-reporter's fake scoop that scares Gangster, grade D, into the confession she reported he had already made, and the cop's inspired ventriloquism with a dead man for dummy.

Aside from these and a few minor laughs, the whole business is as phony as the editor who volunteers a $20 a week raise to the gal reporter after her first story.

Mr. Walsh's "Sez you" "Sez I" dialogue isn't very bright when stretched out to such lengthy discussions as:

"Where are you going?"

"I don't know, where am I going?"

"Well, you're going. You tell me."

"How can I tell you when I don't know where," etc.

It might have stood a better chance as a straight picture for it does manage to work up some good honest indignation over the state of justice in the country.

Leads Play Well.

Joan Bennett and Cary Grant do what they can—which is as good as any one could—with such material. It is a shame to set Grant back at this leading-man sort of thing, however, after he proved in that unfortunate "Sylvia Scarlet," how much better he is as a character actor.

Walter Pidgeon walks off in a well-mannered way with what honors there may be in "Brown Eyes." He is a gangster, Grade A, who plays the piano and meets with the underworld in art galleries, but he is so nicely spoken and quietly sinister that he is almost convincing.

On the stage there are three very familiar gentlemen, the Fred East Trio, and two who are always welcome as visitors, Jack Durant and Frank Mitchell.

The local trio sing the old songs and sing them well, harmonizing and in solo work.

Durant Does a Gable.

Mitchell and Durant started rather slowly at the matinee, but if properly encouraged they will practically destroy themselves for you in very pleasant fashion. The big Durant's agility and the small Mitchell's ability to take punishment, always amaze us. Durant's Gable is practicall Gable himself.

In addition to their own foolishness, they have a singing gentleman named Harry with them, who quite stopped the show in a very special version of "Solitude."

Capt. Willie Mauss will make you gasp as he bicycles about on a tremendous whirling wheel, now right side up, now head hanging down up there near the top of the theater.

The Bryant, Raines and Young dance act opens the bill, and the newsreel, a Bert Lahr comedy, "Gold Bricks," and Max Zinder, leading the orchestra through "Gems of the Opera," complete it.

"MR. DEEDS GOES TO TOWN." Columbia picturization of a story by Clarence Budington Kelland, with screen play by Robert Riskin, starring Gary Cooper, supported by Jean Arthur, George Bancroft, Lionel Stander, Douglas Dumbrille, Raymond Walburn, H. B. Warner, Ruth Donnelly, Spencer Charters, Emma Dunn, Arthur Hoyt and Walter Catlett. Directed by Frank Capra. Reviewed (third week of extended run) by W. A. Whitney.

After a delighted public has presented the Earle Theater with seven days of capacity business and the Metropolitan Theater with a fortnight of record-breaking patronage, what is there left to say which could be more expressive of the superlative merits of "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town?"

The story of the tuba-playing Longfellow Deeds and his adventures in the big city, including his efforts to dispose of $20,000,000, inherited from an uncle he did not know, are by this time too familiar, from the Clarence Budington Kelland story, as well as from its shadow form, to need further expostulation.

Of the cast, headed by Gary Cooper, Jean Arthur and Lionel Stander, there is likewise little reason to speak. The approbation of the public and the press already has spoken eloquently of these sterling performances.

Suppporting the lengthy—it runs 115 minutes—and continually engrossing picture, are the Betty Boop cartoon, "We Did It," and a full 15 minutes of news events from the combined releases of Paramount and Universal newsreels.

"CAPTAIN JANUARY." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a story by Laura E. Richards, with screen play by Sam Hellman, Gladys Lehman and Harry Tugend, starring Shirley Temple, supported by Slim Summerville, Guy Kibbee, Buddy Ebsen, Sara Haden, Jane Darwell, June Lang, Jerry Tucker, Nella Walker, George Irving, James Farley and Si Jenks. Music and lyrics by Lew Pollock and Sidney D. Mitchell and Pollock and Jack Yellen. Dances staged by Jack Donohue. Directed by David Butler. Reviewed (return engagement) by W. A. Whitney.

With the biggest little star—or, if you please, the littlest big star—of motion pictures, plus a company of almost equal distinction, and all in a story of great human, appeal "Captain January" offers family entertainment of the first rank. And already, after two weeks at Loew's Palace Theater, this latest demonstration of juvenile artistry is still as potent a drawing card as ever.

As is well known by this time, the narrative concerns a little sea waif, Star (Miss Temple), and the great affection that exists between her and the old lighthouse keeper, Captain January (Guy Kibbee), who, after rescuing her, takes her to live with him. Captain Nazro (Slim Summerville), comes in and when the truant officer (Sara Haden) tries to take her away, connives with Cap'n January to thwart the effort. Star is finally returned to her legal guardians (George Irving and Nella Walker), but is an unhappy little girl until she discovers that her two captains are the chief officers of her palatial yacht.

Doing what every one likes to see her do, the wee Shirley sings and dances, intoning "Early Bird," "At the Codfish Ball" and "The Right Somebody to Love," and doing her stepping with unbounded enthusiasm.

The romance of the piece is carried by lank Buddy Ebsen, who also dances with the Tiny Temple, and the charming June Lang.

Surrounding the homely feature are "Spooks," a musical subject featuring the Cabin Kids; "The White Hope," a typical comedy, with Joe Cook supported by George Givot, and the Metrotone News.

"ECSTASY." Eureka release of the Slavia-Films production, featuring Hedy Kiesler, Jaromir Rogoz, Aribert Mog and Leopold Kramer. Music and lyrics by Kola Josef, Hadju Imre, Henry Gershwin and William Colligan. English dialogue by Jacque A. Koerpel. Directed by Gustav Machaty. Reviewed (third week) by Sally Stroud.

Lovers of art and connoisseurs of the sensational have guaranteed the extended run of this prize-winning Czechoslovakian film. It is unfortunate for the former that the latter go to the movie in snickering expectancy. And the latter, incidently, will find little to provide excuse for lifting the eyebrow. In brief, "Ecstasy" is of value only in attempting to form a comparative idea of foreign pictures as opposed to the domestic product.

Having a plot which is both simple and time-old, the story moves with a slowness quite unlike the stacatto action Hollywood has accustomed us to. Symbolism, which is employed freely, may sometimes appear far-fetched, bordering on the absurd, but the intent was to cause the audience to use its mental apparatus to connect the subtleties portrayed by animal and plant life with human activity.

Eva, bright with expectancy concerning the happiness of her married life, is early disillusioned with her elderly husband, Emil. He maddens her with his methodical ways and his preoccupation; she turns to a young engineer, Paul, who is young, gay, ardent. Emil kills himself; Eva boards a train going in the opposite direction from Paul's. And that is practically all.

Threading through the tale is a musical seore which is sometimes good and sometimes so botchy it is irritating. With all its faults, which are minimized by its good points, you can hardly miss seeing "Ecstasy" if you like to boast about your knowledge of current silver-sheet offerings.

Accompanying features are almost too many in number: a New Orleans pictorial, Mendelssohn's "Fingel's Cave," with colored nature pictures, the Paris Symphony Orchestra playing "De Friechsutz," and a colored cartoon of Don Quixote in his padded cell, before and after the windmill incident.

'The Tempest'

"THE TEMPEST." The American University Dramatic Club presents the fantasie in five acts by William Shakespeare, directed by Will Hutchins, with dances staged by Louise C. Morse. On the Gymnasium Stage, American University Campus, May 8.

The Cast.

Caliban ..... Edward Hopper
Mariners, dancers, goddesses and spirits.

Presenting its eleventh annual spring production—and the tenth consecutive Shakespearean drama—the American University Dramatic Club last evening presented "The Tempest" before a large and enthusiastic audience.

In five acts sincerely presented and creditably performed, the players recounted the Bard's fantasy of love and romance, fairies and intrigue, a work perhaps second only in its gossamer content and charm of construction to "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

Among the players, Eugene Johnson, as Prospero, the rightful duke of Milan; Edward Hopper, as Caliban, the deformed monster; Roland Roberts, as Stephano, the drunken butler; Peggy Johnson, as Miranda, Prospero's daughter, and Nancy Hall, as Ariel, an airy sprite, stood out as the principal characters not only in the author's own evaluation, but in the enthusiastic manner in which they read their parts.

Others in the company included Homer Patton, as Alonso, the King of Naples; Richard Hummer, as Sebastian, the king's brother; William Thompson, as Antonio, the usurping duke of Milan; Randall Book, as Ferdinand, the king's son; Albert Cooper, as Gonzalo, the honest old counselor; Benjamin Waldo and Howard Thompson, as lords; Edward Thrasher, as Trinculo, a jester; William Fox, as the master of the ship; Albert Hanawalt, as the boatswain, and Catherine Knockey, Virginia Amadon, and Pauline Corkran, as the goddesses Iris, Juno and Ceres.

Mariners included Samuel Keker, Thomas Parks, Victor Purse and James Spratt. The dancers were Doris Brougher, Wilva Hankinson, Virginia Heintz, Berenice Lown, Frences Page and Patricia Paxton. Louise C. Morse staged the dances. The associated spirits included Helen Cowles, Ruth Humphreys, Louise Knight and Marguerite Woodberry.

The music of the evening was furnished by the university orchestra, under the direction of James M. Thurmond, jr., with special music for the action's dances being played by Mary Allen, Rowland Roberts, Anna Rossman and Marian Rossman.

Cue and Curtain

"IS LIFE WORTH LIVING?" The Cue and Curtain of George Washington University presents the comedy-drama in three acts by Lennox Robinson, directed by Marvin Beers, with setting by J. Rubenstein. At the Wardman Park Theater, May 8 and 9. Reviewed Friday evening by W. A. Whitney.

The Cast.

John Twohig ..... Milton Freedman
Annie Twohig ..... Ruth Brewer
Lizzie Twohig ..... Eve Kailey
Eddie Twohig ..... Edward Stevlingson
Christine Lambert ..... Susan Slater
Hector De La Mare ..... Austin Gattis
Constance Constantia ..... Maxine Kahn

Progressing from a good "She Loves Me Not" to a better "Ten Minute Alibi," the Cue and Curtain of George Washington University last evening at the Wardman Park Theater scored its greatest success of the season—and probably of its entire history—presenting Lennox Robinson's Irish comedy-drama, "Is Life Worth Living?"

With just a tinge of dialect in the reading of the lines and before a single setting of almost stark simplicity, the players gave a near-professional treatment to the drama earlier presented by the famed Abbey Players under the title of "Drama at Inish."

A play of coincidences, and the reaction of a group of people thereto, forces the basis structure of the piece, rather than a connected story of progressive action. "Is Life Worth Living?" recounts the concatemation of events during the residency of the De La Mare Repertory Company at the Seaview Hotel.

The entire population, it would seem, influenced by the melodramatic type of plays presented, becomes melancholy and morbid, with all types of things happening which never happened before. To these events, seen and alluded to, the several characters react, until finally the troupe of itinerant players has its contract canceled—and everybody, even the stars of the company, is happy.

A Lucky Number in Cast.

Thirteen named players are in the cast, and thirteen excellent performances are delivered. They all cannot be mentioned, although they deserve it; so, merely to mention the work of Ruth Brewer, as Mrs. Twohig (pronounced Twig); Milton Freedman, as Mr. Twohig; Eve Kailey, as Lizzie, his spinster sister, and Austin Gattis and Maxine Kahn, as the actors, whose delightful overacting was not the least of the play's good points, is just to indicate some of the more outstanding performances without implying any lack of merit in the others.

No group during a single season has advanced as has this one, and a large part of the progress may unquestionably be attributed to the understanding direction by Marvin Beers.

Graf Is Safe in Hanger After Rough Trip Home

Friedrichshafen, May 8 (AP).—The veteran transatlantic dirigible Graf Zeppelin was safe in her hangar tonight after conquering bad weather on a return flight from South America.

The ship was granted permission by the French government to take a short cut by flying over France, instead of going over the Alps.

Capt. von Schiller said unfavorable weather conditions off the coast of Portugal menaced the craft and he wanted to take no chances with 22 passengers aboard.

100 Arrested in Warsaw In Anti-Semitic Plot

Warsaw, May 8 (AP).—Police predicted tonight more arrests in the official investigation of an alleged plot to bomb Jewish restaurants and night clubs.

One hundred anti-Semitic extremists were taken into custody in simultaneous raids after officials received information of the plot. The investigation, officers said, disclosed a well organized, well financed society formed to carry out the alleged bombings. Financial backers of the group are known, police declared.

Headin' Home

Baltimore, Md., May 8.

Marylanders, much excited over the friendly comments in this space which have been reprinted in the local gazettes, have flooded me with additional jottings of Baltimoreana

POE.

The lawyers of the city direct the reportorial attention to one of the greatest of all Maryland barristers, Luther Martin . . . He defended Aaron Burr in the historic case before Chief Justice Marshall, but he rates a paragraph for an additional and liquid reason . . . He was the best two-fisted drinker that ever lived in these parts, and when he was sober, he refused to practice law, scorning the huge retainers offered him.

Once the client had bought a drink or two, or three, however, Martin would race into court and deliver himself of brilliant jury addresses that are cited to this day as the ultimate in oratory.

He is the only private citizen ever given a pension by this State . . . Maryland evidently felt that his magnificent thirst should be endowed.

Edgar Allan Poe is buried in a cemetery here . . . Visitors come from all over the world to peer through the iron gratings . . . St. Paul's Cathedral here was erected on the proceeds of a lottery 25 years ago and a Jewish chap organized and made it tremendously successful.

• • • •

The people miss Cardinal Gibbons, who was one of the affectionate landmarks of the city . . . His daily stroll through the business streets was an afternoon ritual, and on occasions when his great friend Teddy Roosevelt was in town, the two old cronies brought the city to a pitch of excitement.

It was on a visit here that Napoleon Bonaparte's brother met and fell in love with a Baltimore belle, Betsy Patterson . . . They were married, but Napoleon refused to let her enter France and finally forced them to part.

• • • •

The locals are still laughing at a Postoffice Department boner of years back . . . A new postoffice was built in Baltimore and there was a tremendous celebration, speeches, etc. . . . Until they discovered that the postoffice didn't have mail chutes . . . Outside of that it was a very impressive building.

It does a Broadway columnist a great amount of benefit to get away from the beaten track, from Forty-second street to Fifty-ninth, occasionally . . . Come into a town like this, live with the people for a week, study their history and characteristics, and you find your entire viewpoint modified and refreshed . . . It's like giving a car a new coat of paint.

Quite a few great performers have walked down the main street of this town to hang their names in lights on Broadway, by the way . . . Jim Barton hails from this city . . . so does Francis X. Bushman, matinee idol of an earlier generation . . . Charlie Chase is a third and Larry Adler, the kid harmonica genius . . . Ben Lyon was born and raised and worked here . . . Peter Maher, who fought Fitzsimmons, is a local resident . . . Danny Frush, the former English boxer, runs a smart business men's gym in a local bank building and Joe Tipman, who had Terrible Terry McGovern on the canvas in one round, has a tavern in the town.

• • • •

The citizens have a delightful sense of humor . . . They will explode with glee as they point out that Fort McHenry, where Key wrote his ode to liberty, was used during prohibition as the headquarters of the drys . . . The memory so affects them in the recital that they rush you to the nearest bar for a snort of whisky . . . Their favorite dish is shad roe, and as they prepare it in such a restaurant as Miller's, it melts in your mouth . . . But like the fellow in the Philharmonic Orchestra who confessed, after several years, that he didn't like music, I must confess that I don't like shad roe.

Night clubs do not enjoy a great vogue, apart from the Oasis . . . Unlike New Yorkers, the people do not go out to celebrate . . . They stay home and entertain, occasionally relaxing at one of the hotels which offer excellent floor shows . . . But they are not night clubbers.

• • • •

I don't know when I've enjoyed a town so greatly in so short a time . . .

Try as I might, there's only one great screen prospect to be discovered here . . . She's a gorgeous Southern girl singer, named Jerie Kimbell, with Sleepy Hall's band . . . Actually, she's a musical version of Loretta Young, and the collegians of this city affirm that she is a stunner . . . She comes from Alabama, and she has a Southern drawl that's really somethin' . . . Oscar Serlin, Joe Pincus and Al Altman are urged to take a look-see, because she's got what it takes . . . a Broadway columnist is headin' home and happy.

Culbertson on Bridge

Simple Convention.

Certain conventional signals remain a mystery to many players despite the fact that they are explained time and again in bridge books and columns.

Playing in a rubber game recently at Crockford's Club in New York, I had been blessed with an admiring kibitzer for several hours. No matter how elementary a bid or play I had occasion to make, my one-man audience was highly enthusiastic. Then along came this hand.

South, dealer.

SOUTH

♣ A K Q 8

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 heart	Pass	1 spade	Pass
3 no trump (final bid.)

West, my partner, opened the four of diamonds and my king was taken by South's ace. A spade was now led up to dummy, West following with a deuce and, naturally, I let the jack hold the trick. But when the king of spades was led I pounced on with my ace. After that the declarer could make only his own high card tricks and was down one on the nine trick contract.

"Well, that's what I call pretty lucky!" he said. "How did you happen to guess to take the second spade lead? Suppose declarer had held the other spade?"

"But I knew he didn't have it," I answered. "My partner's failure to echo in spades notified me beyond question that he and not declarer had three originally. It is an ordinary convention."

"O!" he said.

Woodfellow Wins 2 Show Events

Gelding Is Standout in First Day of Bradley Farms Classic.

Firenze Red Tape Goes Down to Defeat in First Event.

By John R. Vosburgh.

Down from Connecticut to the National Capital Horse Show yesterday came sleek, brown Woodfellow, of Wynfromere Farm to seriously imperil the rating of Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim's famous Firenze Red Tape as the No. 1 ranking hunter of the United States.

While members of Washington and Virginia society looked on at picturesque Bradley Farms, Md., the 5-year-old gelding from New England, ridden by youthful Miss Helen Bedford, of Fairfield, Conn., impressively installed himself as the outstanding horse of the first day of the three-day classic.

Firenze Red Tape, regarded as the country's foremost hunter, literally stumbled to defeat in his first show of the 1936 event. In a rather disappointing appearance the 9-year-old brown gelding, by Light Brigade out of Persian, slipped on the fourth fence of the first event of the afternoon.

It was the Qualified or Green Hunters class over 4-foot jumps and the famous hunter, ridden by Johnny Fry, of the Guggenheim Stables, apparently missed a stride and took off one rail. In the meantime, Sand Den, big chestnut gelding of Mrs. Ellsworth Augustus, of Willoughby, Ohio, was jumping to the championship in that event under the fine handling of Mrs. Cary Jackson, of Charlottesville, Va.

Woodfellow's two victories came in the 5-and 6-year-old test in the morning and in the colorful ladies' class, working hunters' event in the afternoon. The latter event brought the Wynfromere horse the trophy awarded by Julius Garfinckel, for which five girls from or near Washington competed.

The performances of Mrs. Jackson, incidentally, easily gave her the horsemanship honors of the day. The Charlottesville resident, who trains and rides Mrs. Augustus' horses, had led the Augustus stable to five championships before the final event had been reached.

The Ohio owner's hunters were conspicuous in a field which unfortunately lacked the competition of Mrs. John Hay Whitney's stable, which has long figured in the championship showings. Mrs. Whitney withheld competition due to mourning the death of a relative.

Despite the rather surprising showing of Firenze Red Tape in the morning event, the great horse showed its true metile in the afternoon under the smooth riding of its slight, daring little owner, Mrs. Guggenheim. The black-haired socialite was determined to vindicate her hunter's rating and brought him out in spirited form to compete for the Peter Vorhees De Graw Memorial Trophy which he had won in 1934.

With her gray-haired, enthusiastic husband, Col. Guggenheim, a vociferous spectator, Mrs. Guggenheim rode her Firenze Red Tape, Firenze Miss Coquette, Firenze Cliftons Beau and Firenze Dorette, placing three of them. But it was Firenze Red Tape which was the standout. Firenze Cliftons Beau was second. Claws, owned and ridden by U. S. Randle, was third, and Firenze Miss Coquette fourth, although many thought she should have had second place.

District Boxing Body Joins N. B. A. to Protect Title Bout; Choice of Referee Pending

By Bill McCormick.

The announcement that the District Boxing Commission had affiliated with the all-powerful National Boxing Association, as predicted exclusively in The Washington Post last Monday, proved the lull before the storm at a significant meeting of the local moguls of maul yesterday afternoon.

The storm came when Pete Reilly and Jimmy Erwin, managers of Champion Freddie Miller and Challenger Pete Sarron, got around to the business of ironing out the details of the featherweight title bout to be fought by their charges at Griffith Stadium next Monday night.

Wily Reilly seemed the winner of the pre-fight brawl as he coolly pressed home his points when necessary and gracefully yielded when necessary. Erwin may have scored a victory with his suggestion that the referee for the important title bout be selected by drawing names out of a hat, a suggestion which Maj. Ernest Brown, chairman of the commission, said might be followed.

The affiliation with the N. B. A. will give the District Boxing Commission real "teeth" for the first time in this most important move since the legalization of boxing. It means that any disciplinary action taken by the local governing board of beak-biffing will be effective in the 30 States, two countries, two territories and three cities now members of the National Boxing Association.

Joining the N. B. A. means also that a victory for Pete Sarron in Monday night's battle will entitle him to clear recognition as champion in the territories now affiliated with the national organization.

Maj. Brown opened the meeting, called for the purpose of acquainting the officials of the commission as to how they were to handle different situations at Washington's first title bout, with the announcement that the group he heads had joined the N. B. A.

Maj. Brown then pointed out that Monday night's bout put Washington on trial as a big-league fight town. He insisted that there should be no criticism of the manner in which the officials conducted themselves or the manner in which the fighters fought.

Commissioner Kenneth Parkinson then asked that the foul-proof cups to be worn by the fighters be examined. After examination, it was

Gevinson Bows In Ring Trial Semifinal

D. C. Boy, Nedomatsky Are Named on List of Alternates.

BULLETIN.

Lou Gevinson, Washington; Danny Farrar, Duke University; Ivan Nedomatsky, Maryland, and Ray Matulewicz, Duke, were named to the list of alternates in their classes, to be available in event of illness, ineligibility or failure to make weight takes either of the finalists in the classes out of the picture.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Ill., May 8.—Lou Gevinson, southpaw puncher from Washington, failed tonight in his quest for a berth on Uncle Sam's Olympic Boxing Squad, bowing to Ted Kara, of Cleveland, in a bristling semifinal battle in the International Amphitheater.

Ivan Nedomatsky, Maryland University welterweight, fighting in the middleweight division, also fell by the wayside, meeting defeat at the hands of Ord Fink of Syracuse University, after eliminating Steece Brubaker of King College.

Gevinson, the sensation of the opening night when he scored two knockouts, was conquered by a more clever fighter. His southpaw style failed to bother Kara, who kept the young Treasury Department employe's lethal left tied up most of the fight.

When Gevinson's left did land, it was high and ineffective. Kara, fighting a carefully planned battle, pumped solid rights into Lou's body and cracked him with lefts to the head to win a clean-cut decision.

Gevinson's best round was the second, when he popped Kara with a left to the head. Kara saw the punch coming, but almost failed to duck in time. The blow landed a trifle high and Kara quickly tied Gevinson up until he regained his poise.

Entered as a welterweight, but forced to fight in the 160-pound division because he was a shade over the lighter class limit of 147 pounds, Nedomatsky, who drew a first-round bye, was puzzled by Brubaker's southpaw style in the opening round, which went to the King College clouter by a wide margin.

Bird's Nest on Course Called 'Natural Hazard'

Chicago, May 8 (AP).—As indifferent to the rights of others as to personal danger, a meadow lark has won rating as a "natural hazard" on the Westward Ho Golf Course in suburban Melrose Park.

The bird parked herself on a nest of four eggs on the walk between the eleventh green and twelfth tee. She became so resentful of the approach of golfers, the club found it necessary today to build a fence around her nest and post the area as a natural hazard under the heading, "Bird Sanctuary."

Yanks' Streak Snapped, A's Win, 3-2

Puccinelli Hits Home Run; Rhodes Checks Old Mates With 4 Hits.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 8.—The Philadelphia Athletics, led by George Puccinelli, who hit a home run with one one in the third, defeated the New York Yankees, 3-2, here today, and ended the Yanks' winning streak at four straight.

Puccinelli, star batsman of the Baltimore team in the International League last year, was partially responsible for the third Philadelphia run. This one came in the first inning when Bob Johnson singled to left, raced to third on Puccinelli's single, and scored when Pitcher Red Ruffing made a wild pitch.

Dusty Rhodes, one-time Yanks' pitcher, led the A's to victory today. Although he had to be relieved in the eighth by Bill Dietrich, he gave the Yanks only four hits in that time.

Giants Give Fred Marberry His Unconditional Release

By the United Press.

Burbank, Calif., May 8.—James J. Jeffries, king of the heavyweights for six years at the turn of the century, is convinced that modern fighters don't measure up to the old-timers, and that Fitzsimmons, Corbett or "most any of the boys" could have taken Joe Louis in their prime.

Big Jim, still the powerful giant of 35 years ago, was found puttering around in Jeffries Barn, his amateur fighting arena here on the outskirts of Los Angeles. Jeffries, now 50 pounds over his former fighting weight of 206, has lived on his 100-acre ranch for some 30 years and keeps his hand in the fight game by refereeing the Thursday night card in his remodelled barn.

"How about Louis?" he was asked.

"Well, who's going to give him a fight?" Jim replied. "Max Schmeling won't have a chance. The rest of the boys can't take it. They can't come off the floor and keep punching like we did in the old days.

"And they aren't fast enough. Too slow; too heavy. Most of 'em telegraph their blows and can't get away from a punch. A good fighter has to keep from getting hit on the body. You have to fade away from a blow—like this, see? Why I don't think I ever took more than a half dozen hard body blows in all my big fights put together."

Nats Outslug Red Sox to Win, 12-9

5-Game Losing Streak Halted; Kress Is Hero of 17-Hit Attack.

Four Boston Pitchers Shelled; Four Runs in Eighth Clinch Game.

By Shirley Povich.

Sports Editor of The Post.

With a fine disregard for the expensive cast representing the Nouveau Riche Boston Red Sox, the thoroughly unreliable Nats yesterday emerged from their five-game slump with a wild and disorderly victory over the Boston Club.

By the inflated score of 12 to 9, the home-spun Washington team brought to a screeching stop both its own five-game losing streak and the four-game winning streak that the league's leading Sox had brought to town.

Amid the shrieks of 10,000 ladies' day fans the Nats wiped out a 4-1 lead held by the Red Sox in the second inning, a 6-5 lead that the Red Sox owned in the fifth, and then put the ball game away in the eighth with four more runs.

The Red Sox threw 17 men into the battle in a vain effort to stem the tide of 17 Washington base hits and reclaim some of those runs the rampaging Nats were making against four Boston pitchers in every inning but the third and seventh.

Slugging Offsets Bad Play.

Throughout the early innings, home-run clouts were keeping the Red Sox in the ball game. Jack Russell, essaying a starting role for the first time, did tolerably well except when he was pitching home-run balls to Dusty Cooke and Rick Ferrell with men on base and five of the seven runs he surrendered to the Red Sox were the direct result of two circuit smashes.

Washington not only beat the Red Sox at their own slugging game, but overcame a siege of stupid base-running that threatened to choke off their slugging efforts. Such items as Jake Powell absurdly attempting to stretch a single into a double in the first inning, an equally absurd attempt of Red Kress to take three bases on a double to left in the sixth, and Carl Reynolds' successful attempt to get himself picked off first base in the same inning, were doing the Nats no good.

Kress Gets 4 Hits.

But each culprit offset with his bat, his sins on the bases. Red Kress, the story-book hero as a substitute Washington infielder, slammed out four of the Nats' 17 hits, driving across two runs and scoring two; Reynolds contributed a single and a valuable double to the proceedings and Powell slammed out two singles before whacking a lengthy triple to the leftfield in the decisive eighth inning.

The Nats went into the ninth with a 12-7 lead, and those four runs in the eighth appeared to be superfluous, but not as matters eventuated. Jimmy DeShong, who had relieved Russell in the embarrassing eighth inning with two on base, and forced Cramer to pop up, encountered difficulties in that ninth.

After striking out Manush, he walked Foxx and Werber scored Foxx with a double to left. DeShong then pitched a double to Rick Ferrell that scored Werber, and with two out, he passed Pinch-hitter Rick Ferrell. Pinch-hitter Johnny Marcum, at the plate, rep-

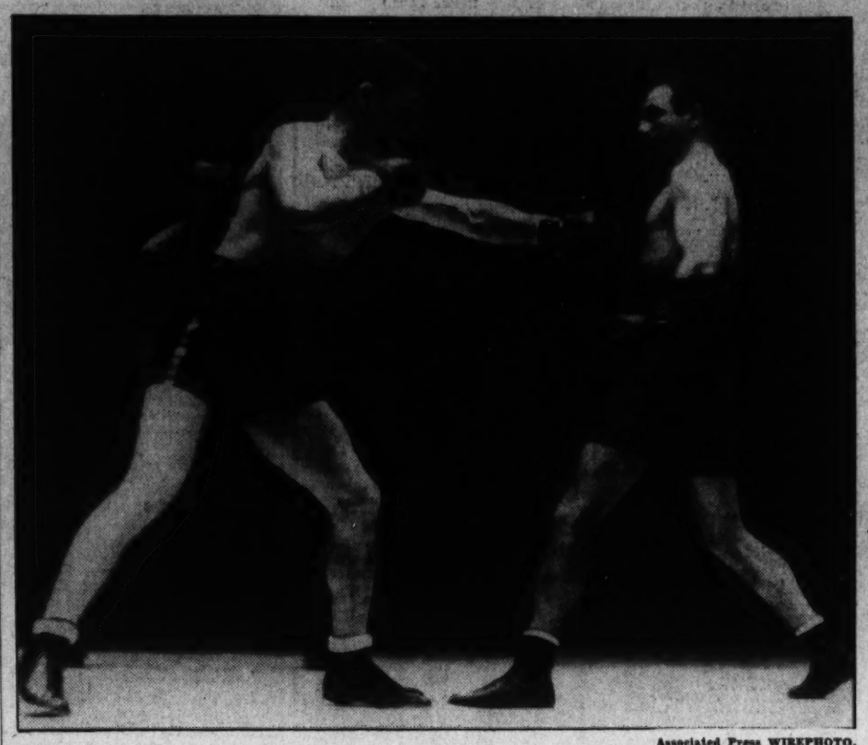
McLarnin on Offensive Before Defeat Set In



Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

They will call Buddy Myer up to home plate shortly before 3 o'clock at Griffith Stadium this afternoon, players of both the Nats and the Red Sox will stand with caps doffed while Senator Pat Harrison makes a pretty speech, and Myer will be presented with a $500 diamond ring as official American League recognition of the fact that he led all the league's hitters during the season of 1935.

POVICH.

But in the very hour of the greatest honor that ever befell the Washington captain and second baseman in his 12-year big-league career, there will be a strangely discordant note. Because, you see, proverbially fickle fandom has accepted another as the second baseman of the Washington club and taken him into their hearts as the Cinderella Man of baseball.

This fellow who is intruding upon the scene at the moment when Myer is being honored for his feats of 1935 is the irrepressible Red Kress, story-book hero of the dismal Washington campaign of last season, who has developed an apparently incurable habit of capitalizing in a grand manner on every circumstance that removes Buddy Myer from the Washington lineup.

At this writing, Kress again is the fair-haired lad of Washington fans, quite won over by his play of the last two days, and quite willing, in the ecstacy of the moment, to let him continue as the second baseman of the Nats, Myer or no Myer, League Batting Champion or no Batting Champion.

It was on a hot August afternoon in 1935 that Red Kress was notified of his release to the Chattanooga club, sadly told that all the big league clubs had waived their claims to him. Back to his Connecticut avenue apartment he made his way, pondering how he would break the news to the wife and kiddy, when the telephone rang. They wanted Kress back at the ball park. Umpire Bill McGowan had just tossed Buddy Myer out of the game and the Nats had no second baseman available for the second game of the double-header.

Kress didn't simply grab at the straw. He got a strangle hold on it. Donning the uniform that he thought he had laid away for the last time, he galloped out to the ball field, slapped some Cleveland pitching for four straight hits and canceled with the might of his bat the release to Chattanooga that had been written only two hours before.

They never did get Kress out of the lineup after that. With the return of Myer, they shifted the Red Head to shortstop, he hit safely at least once in his next 24 games, and wound up the season with an even .300 batting average. But there was no place for Kress in the regular 1936 lineup. The league batting champion, Buddy Myer, was playing second and the super-sensational Cecil Travis was at shortstop.

So Kress languished on the bench throughout the first three weeks of the season and then, two days ago, Buddy Myer fell ill. It was Kress' chance. And he didn't miss it. For two days now, he has been a positive sensation at second base, this Cinderella Man, who profits always from Buddy Myer's misfortunes.

The first day they put him in the line-up—last Thursday—Kress put the Nats in the ball game with a home run and collected two other hits. Yesterday, he went to bat five times. Once he walked, once he hit a double, three times he singled, for a perfect day at the plate.

He's hitting .615 now, with eight hits in his 13 times at bat this season, and out there in the field he has played flawless ball, this opportunist, who has captured the imagination of Washington fans. Contrast that with Buddy Myer's anemic .216 average and the vivid memory of Myer's batting failure this season, and you have the answer to Capital fandom's indifference to Myer's absence.

Manager Bucky Harris has a decision to make today: Whether or not to take a .615 hitter out of the lineup and substitute Myer on the occasion of the American League tribute to him. To play Myer would be the nice gesture, .216 average or no .216 average. Buddy Myer, even when only dimly resembling the 1935 league batting champion, is no drawback to any club. But excuse this department please, from making the decision that confronts Harris today.

In Short——

Manager Joe Cronin, of the Red Sox, yesterday barred all newspapermen from the Boston dressing room . . . "What's the idea, Joe?" one of the Washington scriveners asked . . . "I don't want you in here, isn't that plain enough?" was Cronin's answer . . . eight victories in ten games apparently has contributed nothing to Cronin's good humor . . . Jake Powell did not deal gently with Third Baseman Bill Werber when he crashed into Werber while running out his triple in the eighth inning yesterday . . . there were words and fists were cocked when Umpire Brick Owens stepped between 'em . . . Powell is rapidly gaining a reputation as a tough guy on the base paths . . . he put both Hank Greenberg and Mickey Cochrane out of commission during the Detroit series here . . . but operates in the comfort of the fact that there can be no retaliation inasmuch as he is out there in the outfield, safe from the enemy's spikes.

Wins Own Game.

The four-hit pitching of Works Progress Administration's right-hander, Lee Raiford, set General Accounting Office back with a 5-4 defeat yesterday. Raiford won his own ball game in the third inning with a triple with two men on.

Gardner Quits Post.

Joe Gardner, popular athletic director of Georgetown Prep for the past six years, yesterday announced his intention to retire at the close of the present school year. He would not disclose his future plans last night.

8 Seek Dixie Handicap at Pimlico

Historic Race Today Aim of Stake Stars; Track Expects 25,000.

A Staff Correspondent.

Pimlico, May 8.—The $10,000 added Dixie Handicap, oldest Maryland turf fixture with the exception of the Preakness, will feature tomorrow's week-end program at the historic hill-top track. The Dixie is being run this year on the day generally set aside for the Preakness, which is scheduled this year on May 16.

A small, but select field will answer the bugle call this afternoon in the mile and three-sixteenths test. Eight first flight campaigners were named in the overnight entries and they represent as many prominent racing interests.

E. F. Seagram's Stand Pat, and Goods, from the Brookmeade stable, are likely to draw the principle support in the mutuel machines. Both are considered at home at the long, grueling route. Although the race is not at his distance, Cycle, of the Howe Stable, will draw a share of the backing. Others in the field and all considered threats are J. W. Y. Martin's Dark Hope, W. H. Furst's Mantagna, Greentree Stable's First Minstrel, A. G. Vanderbilt's Gallant Mac and R. A. Moore's Thursday.

Herndon A. C. to Play.

The Herndon A. C. will entertain the Stansbury A. C. today at 2:30 p. m., on the Herndon diamond.

Italian Is Near Knockout in First Round

Lightweight Champion Batters Foe in Thrilling Comeback.

By Alan Gould.

Associated Press Sports Editor.

New York, May 8.—Surviving a first-round blast that had him battered and bleeding, apparently on the verge of a knockout, Tony Canzoneri came back tonight to give Irish Jimmy McLarnin a terrific licking in one of the most spectacular fights the little fellows have waged here in many a moon.

At the end of ten furious rounds, witnessed by a sweltering near-capacity crowd in Madison Square Garden, Canzoneri carried off the unanimous decision of two judges and the referee, Arthur Donovan.

The little lightweight champion,

Seven Rounds Won by Tony.

Canzoneri won seven of the ten rounds, dropped McLarnin to one knee with a terrific right-hander in the second round and had the one-time "baby faced" dynamiter at the mercy of his two-fisted fire at the finish.

Once the terror of all New York lightweights, McLarnin started off with so sudden and furious an attack that it looked as though the veteran Canzoneri would quickly be added to the Irishman's long list of victims. Only his remarkable stamina saved Tony from going down and, possibly, out in that hectic first round. Blood streamed from his nose. His legs acted like a pair of stilts. His eyes were glassy. The "wise money" that had made Jimmy a 9 to 5 favorite at the ringside was all ready to be spent.

But the fortunes of fistic warfare turned again and just as swiftly. Having taken Mcarnin's stiffest punches without going down and recuperating rapidly between rounds, Canzoneri came out with a second round rush that soon had the crowd in an absolute frenzy and McLarnin in obvious perplexity.

Canzoneri Awakens.

The bronzed and crafty Canzoneri, regaining the aggressive so quickly that McLarnin must have thought he was facing another fellow or two other fellows, opened fire with both hands. He not only lashed Jimmy fearfully with both hands, but made the Irishman's counter punches look foolish. A right smash that started from the floor dropped Jimmy to one knee but he bounced up without a count.

From there on, with the exception of the fourth and eighth, which went to McLarnin by a shade on points, it was all Canzoneri.

In the fifth, ninth and tenth rounds McLarnin staggered under Canzoneri's two-fisted fire. Jimmy's nose bled profusely from the fifth on. In the ninth only the ropes saved the former welter king from hitting the floor after he absorbed a terrific blast to the head. Tony's left landed flush and Jimmy recoiled as though hit by a club. He plunged into the ropes, righted himself, but barely lasted the round.

McLarnin Has Courage.

McLarnin fought the tenth and last round mainly on his nerve and courage. His face was swollen, his nose bleeding, his arms laden with weariness. Lashed at intervals by his rival's sharp blows, Jimmy countered feebly and moved about like a man in a trance, but he managed to remain erect to the final bell.

The paid attendance was 16,905, and the gate receipts, $85,763.50.

Jimmy McLarnin, after the fight, conceded he "ought to quit," but he wasn't as convincing about it as his veteran manager, Pop Foster. Both have said the same thing before.

"Fighting once a year is tough going," said McLarnin. "I just didn't duck enough tonight. Tony is a grand fighter."

Foster added vehemently: "I will insist Jimmy quit the ring. He should never have taken this fight. I was against it."

Tempestuous Takes Pimlico Feature From Buck Langhorne

Finish Drive Wins Event By Head

Manager Bill Scores in 1st; Whiscenda in Third Race.

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Pimlico Race Track, May 8.—Jockey Moose Peters, with Tempestuous under him, appeared to "steal" the Brooklander, today's feature race. Buck Langhorne, the most improved horse on the grounds, apparently was runnng off with the purse when Peters put Tempestuous to a hard drive and up he bounded. Jockey Decallis on Buck Langhorne was guiding his charge along the rail and did not appear to see the streaking Tempestuous until too late.

The judges called for a photo of the finish, but it did not change the result. It was Tempestuous by at least a head. And those who backed his chances gained a $17.10 mutuel after the gelding showed a flip-flop of form.

Legume, the property of Breckinridge Long, was the hard-luck horse of the race and managed to salvage third money. When the break came and the assistant starter was chinning himself on the colt's bridle Jockey Bejshak straightened him out at once and had gained the top before the field reached the backstretch. However, the effort had taken too much out of the son of Epinaud and he tired in the early stretch.

A crowd of 8,000 witnessed the program and the chosen few participated in an $18.30 daily double mutuel.

Manager Bill Wins.

Manager Bill, a $4.30 favorite made good in a miserably run opening race for Maryland breds. Clever Girl, second, was bothered by both the winner and Taunton, which finished third. Jockey Joe Renick made a claim of foul which was disallowed. The start was the worst of the meeitng with Taunton and Wickliffe as good as left. Vanda Cerula beat the gate by some three lengths but quit.

Thomas Hitchcock's Eldorador was the second favoriie of the day to score. Ridden by Regan McKinney, the ace gentleman rider. Eldorador had things his own way most of the route. Bold Fellow the only horse with a chance during the late stages, was erased when his right stirrup broke, throwing Jockey Pat McGinnis to the turf. Second money went to Black Feathers by default far in the rear of the winner. The Spy, an early pace setter, was third in the field of seven.

Whiscenda, from the E. K. Bryson barn, made it two wins in a row in the third race, defeating among others Alexandrine and Story Time. Jockey Holton Babson broke the Whiskalong gelding in front and stayed there through the 4½ furlongs. Whiscenda was a heavily played second choice at $7.80 mutuel.

Preston Burch sent a well-meant Kearsarge to the post ni the fourth race and the Jeffords forces cashed a bet. The son of Man o' War, eligible for the Preakness, ran the legs off Badge of Honor, the favorite, to win as Jockey Moose Peters pleased. Badge of Honor was second and Rowes Crump came from far back to be third. The winner paid $16.70.

The Bryson Stable made it a double for the day when Carvola proved much the best in a field of nine sprinters. The Carlaris filly bounced by Masked Gal and Lady's Beau in the stretch. Microbe, the favorite, was practically left in a very ragged start. The winner was a $16.40 mutuel.

The A. C. Compton stable scored its second success of the day when Apprehend came through with a closing drive that found Miss Snow second. The comera was consulted for third money, and Distracting took the decision from Chief Hollis. The winner was a 4.90 favorite.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MANAGER BILL, $4.30, $2.90, $2.40; CLEVER GIRL, $4.00, $3.00; TAUNTON, $2.60.

MANAGER BILL, away in the first flight, raced reserved for the first six furlongs, took command readily when reaching the final turn, was hard urged thereafter and drew out slowly during the stretch run. CLEVER GIRL went prominently in the early racing, rallied nicely when placed to a hard drive in the last five-sixteenths, was sloughed by TAUNTON entering the homestretch, recovered and finished stoutly alongf the inside to gain second in the last 10 yards. TAUNTON, away poorly, reached the leaders entering the homestretch, but he had too much taken out of him and he tired after interfering with CLEVER GIRL. WICKLIFFE, away poorly, closed a good gap. VANDA CERULEA opened up a long lead early, but flattened out when caught. BALLY BAY had no excuses. SUN SCOUT was outrun after breaking very slow.

SECOND RACE—Two miles. Purse, $1,000. The Springdale Steeplechase. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 2:50. Winner, T. Hitchcock's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—EL DORADOR, $4.10, $3.40, $3.00; BLACK FEATHER, $8.60, $4.60; THE SPY, $9.30.

EL DORADOR, shuffled back soon after the start, went up on the inside going to the second fence to reach a forward position, took an easy lead at the eighth fence, then fencing boldly thereafter, held the race safe. BLACK FEATHER went stronely from the beginning, challenged stoutly going to the tenth fence, but was held safe for the remainder of the trip. THE SPY showed a good effort and was best of the others. WORLD SERIES was unable to reach a contending position. SWAGGER STICK lost ground for the entire trip, but showed a good effort. BOLD FELLOW was racing in third place after clearing the next to last fence. He lost his rider on the flat when one of his stirrup leathers snapped. THE IMMORTAL II fell at the third jump.

THIRD RACE—Four and one-half furlongs. Purse, $900; claiming. The Arundel. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:21. Off at 3:22½. Winner, E. K. Bryson's ch. g. (2), by Whiskalong—Polycenda. Trained by H. Baker. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:47 3-5, 0:54 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WHISCENDA, $7.80, $4.20, $3.30; ALEXANDRINE, $7.00, $4.00; STORY TIME, $3.50.

WHISCENDA, quick to begin and saving ground while in command, rallied gamely to punishment when straightened into the homestretch, was inclined to bear out during the closing furlong, but came out slowly. ALEXANDRINE forced a steady pace from the beginning, made strong efforts, but was not good enough. STORY TIME followed within striking distance of the leaders and came determinedly under a hard drive. OVERPLAY circled his field and finished gamely. PREVARICATE raced evenly. EJECTOR broke slowly and lacked speed under punishment. MONOLOGUE and BRIEF were held safe.

DAILY DOUBLE PAID $18.30.

FOURTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $900. The Late Arrivals. For maiden 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:46. Off at 3:48½. Winner, W. M. Jeffords' ch. or br. c. (3), by Man o' War—Baton. Trained by P. M. Burch. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:48 2-5, 1:13 2-5, 1:39 2-5, 1:44 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—KEARSARGE, $16.70, $5.50, $3.50; BADGE OF HONOR, $3.00, $2.70; ROWES CRUMP $4.30.

KEARSARGE, going in improved fashion and having much more speed than usual, forced a steady pace while following BADGE OF HONOR, assumed command when reaching the homestretch and drew out as if much the best. BADGE OF HONOR outran his field to the first turn, was steadied until challenged, but was no match for the winner when collared. ROWES CRUMP, slow to gain his best stride, circled his field and came gamely in the last stages. BLUE ALICE was unable to better her position after racing in the first flight. SLEEPY ROX could not threaten. TWICE was done after going six furlongs. The others were never formidable.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $900; claiming. The Cecil. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start bad from stall gates in chute. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:16. Off at 4:27. Winner, E. PREVENTION	(Knapp)	108	8	7	7²	7²	7⁴	9	9	29.70

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CARVOLA, $16.40, $6.70, $5.10; MASKED GAL, $5.40, $5.40; LADY'S BEAU, $8.10.

CARVOLA, away slowly and forced to race on the outside, bettered her position steadily when in full stride, closed full of run when straightened into the homestretch and drew out smartly after displacing the leaders. MASKED GAL worked her way into a contending position entering the homestretch and held on with good energy for the closing drive. LADY'S BEAU, unruly at the post, displayed nice speed to open up a clear lead at the turn, but tired in the last furlong. SON OF TROY weakened after having speed in the first half mile. LIGHT was away poorly and was never a factor thereafter. MICROBE was also away poorly and had no chance. SCUDDER stopped as did STAGE WHISPER. PREVENTION broke very slow.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000. The Brocklandwood. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good for all but Legume from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:32. Off at 4:53. Winner, Mrs. T. Stevenson's ch. g. (5), by Sickle—Equinoctial. Trained by F. Gilpin. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Two-dollar mutuels paid—THREE DAGGERS, $11.20, $6.20, $5.20; WISHING STAR, $11.80, $7.00; JOBAKHETA, $12.20.

THREE DAGGERS, sluggish in the early running and far back for six furlongs, gained fast in the last half mile, carried WISHING STAR wide into the homestretch, but closed gamely and was up in the last sixteenth. WISHING STAR, away slowly, went to the outside to improve his position, then was carried out all during the stretch. JOBAKHETA shook off JUSTA GLIDER and GOODY GOODY, but weakened during the stretch drive. HAPPY EASTER was sent up fast midway of the backstretch, moved into a forward position at the turn, but faltered in the final drive when made too much use of. MANUAL was crowded back leaving the backstretch, then came again when clear. GOODY GOODY tired after holding a forward position. DEARZIN went evenly throughout. JUSTA GLIDER stopped in the last five-sixteenths. The others were outrun.

3 U. S. Colts Among 25 To Run at EpsomDowns

Epsom Downs, England, May 8 (AP).—Twenty-five 3-year-old colts, one of them American-owned, were listed today as probable starters in the Derby to be run May 27 over 1½ miles at Epsom.

The field includes the two highly regarded favorites, Lord Astor's Pay Up, winner of the 2,000 guineas at Newmarket and the Aga Khan's Bala Hissar, stablemate of Bahran, the 1935 winner. William Woodward's Boswell, the American-owned colt, also is well fancied in the wagering.

No Kingdom But a Trophy for a Horse

Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim accepts from Andrew J. (Cy) Cummings, a handsome silver trophy won by Firenze, her entry in the local hunters class yesterday at the National Capital Horse Show at Bradley Farms. The trophy is the Peter Vorkees de Gran Memorial Trophy, a valuable piece of silverware. But Firenze seems to be thinking that if it's all right with the others she'd just as leave have a bag of oats for her end of it.

Western Wins, 9-8, as Roosevelt's 3-Run Rally in 9th Falls Short

Georgetown Nine Leads In Series

Kushman Scores Second Victory; Hannagan Hits Homer.

By George Considine.

A long, listless ball game ended in a blaze of excitement yesterday in Roosevelt Stadium as Western squeezed out a 9-to-8 triumph over the Rough Riders. It was Lee Kushman's second victory of the inter-high series.

Trailing 5 to 9 in the last half of the ninth inning, Roosevelt struck back with great vigor with a rally that barely fell short of its objective. With one out Hannagan cracked a terrific home run to centerfield, scoring Treganowan ahead.

After Coakley had come in on an error by the Western shortstop, Kushman found himself in a tough spot, but he retired the side by striking out Silverman with the tying and winning runs on the bases.

It was Francis Coakley who gave the ultimate winners a flying start in the first inning. In wretched form, the Roosevelt pitcher walked four straight men and Western started its scoring without an effort.

The visitors buckled down in earnest in the second frame and reeled off five runs, three of which came in on Alofoginis's double. He quickly scored himself when Middleton contributed a two-bagger.

Roosevelt retaliated nobly and managed to chalk up four runs in its half of the second. But, like the ninth-inning rally, the home team couldn't quite make the grade.

Nats Drub Red Sox, 12-9, Ending Slump

resented the tying run until he sealed the Nats' victory with a pop to Travis.

A raw muff by Jess Hill on Foxx's liner to left staked the Sox to a 1-0 lead in the first inning, but the Nats tied it on singles by Lewis, Travis and Powell. The Sox bounced back with three more runs in the second when Cooke clouted his homer over the rightfield wall with two on, but Kress' double and Millies' single cut the lead to 4-2.

Fritz Ostermueller, in the box for Boston because of the success of left handers against the Nats, was out of the box in the fourth when the Nats accumulated three runs and a 5-4 lead. McNair's muff on Travis' grounder accounted for one run and Reynolds drove the other pair across with a double to right center.

Back bounced Boston into a 6-5 lead in the fifth when Foxx walked and Rick Ferrell pounded a homer into the leftfield seats, but the Nats responded with two runs in their own half of the inning against Jack Wilson when Kress singled, Kuhel walked, Pinch Hitter Johnny Stone singled and Bolton hit into a forced play.

They never relinquished the lead again. Kress' double made it 8-6 in the sixth with Johnny Welch pitching, and with Jack Bowers pitching for the Sox in the eighth Melillo encouraged four more runs when he muffed Travis' hard smash. With two out, the assault began. Powell tripled over Manush's head. Kress singled to right, Kuhel tripled to the rightfield corner, Stone walked and Deshong, personally drove in that twelfth run with a single to right.

Marberry Is Given Release By Giants After Brief Trial

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 9.—Fred (Firpo) Marberry, veteran pitcher, was given his unconditional release and Charles English, rookie infielder, was returned to the Galveston club of the Texas League by the New York Giants today.

Marberry, famous as a relief hurler, joined the Giants this year after umpiring in the American League last season. He appeared in only one game and that three days ago when he pitched only one-third of an inning against the Pirates and allowed one hit.

Marberry, famed as a fast-balling relief pitcher when he helped Washington to win pennants in 1924 and 1925, was traded by the Nats to Detroit in an even swap for Earl Whitehill during the winter of 1932-33.

He helped the Tigers to win the 1934 pennant but early in the 1935 season retired from the mound to accept an appointment as an American League umpire.

A taste of umpiring soured Marberry on the profession and at the end of the season he announced his retirement from that phase of the game.

Navy Athletes Engage Dozen Foes Today

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., May 8.—Navy athletes will be busy along all lines of endeavor tomorrow, varsity and plebe teams engaging in a dozen contests.

Two of the four outstanding events will take place away from home. These will be the rowing races on Princeton's Lake Carnegie and a field and track meet with the University of North Carolina, at Chapel Hill. The middies have their varsity and jayvee eights entered in the rowing regatta. They will be pitted against like crews of Princeton and Syracuse University and the brushes will be over a course of 1¾ miles.

The middies will make a determined effort to trim North Carolina in the field and track games, a feat they have never before achieved.

The program of varsity contests at home calls for a baseball game with Duke University, lacrosse with the University of Maryland, tennis with University of North Carolina, rifle match with the Essex Troop rifle team, of Newark, N. J., and golf with Johns Hopkins University. The lacrosse game will attract more than average interest, as the Tars and Terrapins appear to be the top-flight teams in the East.

The Navy plebes will engage in the following competition: Baseball, Eastern High School, of Washington; field and track, Mercersburg Academy, of Mercersburg, Pa.; tennis, St. Alban's School, of Washington.

Try Scoring a Fight At Sarron-Miller Bout

Entrants in The Washington Post boxing contest may get much enjoyment and add to their knowledge of the proper method of scoring by taking a blank to Griffith's Stadium next Monday night and scoring the Freddie Miller-Pete Sarron fight as it progresses.

Those who do this will not only get a chance to test their ability to score a fight as it goes along, but if they don't agree with the official verdict given at the ringside in case the bout goes the distance, they will have a black and white basis for arguing that the official scorers were wrong.

In the meantime, get your entry into The Post boxing contest editor, and take a chance of earning that free trip to the Joe Louis-Max Schmeling heavyweight bout in New York next month.

The Object.

To predict as closely as possible the official outcome of the Freddie Miller-Pete Sarron featherweight championship boxing bout to be held at Griffith Stadium May 11.

The Prizes.

First prize—One ticket, railroad transportation from Washington and hotel bill in New York for the Joe Louis-Max Schmeling bout to be held in June.

Second prize—One ticket to the Louis-Schmeling fight.

The Rules.

File your entry on the above coupon, or similar blank, showing just how you think the bout will end. If you think it will end in a knockout, mark the coupon thus, showing the round in which you believe it will end, the winner and the time of knockout. In case of a knockout, the entrant calling the winner and round will win. If two or more call the winner and round, the one coming nearest to the time of knockout will win. If two or more are tied on time, the contestant scoring the fight nearest to correctly in the rounds preceding the knockout will win.

If the bout goes the distance, the contestant whose total score most nearly approximates the average score struck by the referee and two judges at the Sarron-Miller bout will be declared the winner. In case of a tie, the contestant who has the greatest number of rounds scored correctly will be declared the winner.

All ties that cannot otherwise be broken will be decided on the time of receipt of your entry. All scoring must be done according to the rules and regulations of the District Boxing Commission. The commission rule on scoring reads as follows:

"Scoring shall be by the '5-point' system. The winner of any round is marked 5. The loser of any round is marked from '0.1' to '4.9.' When a round is even, each contestant is scored '5.'"

Employes of The Post and their relatives are not eligible to enter this contest.

Address all entries to "Boxing Contest Editor," The Washington Post.

With two out in the eleventh, Mostow singled, stole second and went to third on Moran's one-baser. When the entire Laurel infield gathered around first base to protest Moran's safety, Mostow dashed home with the winning run.

Julian Wells, Hyattsville hurler, allowed the losers only 3 hits and struck out 12.

Deacons Lose To Hoyas by 10-9 Score

Crewshaw's Home Run in Eighth Saves Day for Hilltoppers.

Gus Crenshaw's home run over the leftfield embankment, scoring Johnny Cavadine ahead of him, enabled Georgetown's beleaguered baseball forces to come from behind in the eighth and nose out the fighting Deacons of Wake Forest, 10 to 9, in a free-hitting game yesterday at the Hilltop.

Crenshaw's herculean wallop, his first of the season, not only saved the day for Georgetown, but jolted the Southerners into their second defeat at the hands of a District team, for George Washington trounced the visitors two days ago.

Big Mike Petroskey started for the eventual winners, and after a shaky start settled to his task in convincing fashion until the eighth, when Wake Forest became riled and hammered 4 runs over the pan and Big Mike out of the box. Tony Barabas finished the game and held the Deacons in check.

Harry Bassin, first baseman, and "Smitty" Nau also contributed circuit clouts to the Hilltoppers' victory.

D. C. Boxing Board Joins National Unit

Referee to Call Fouls.

Later, it was definitely decided that the referee would call a foul, if he saw it, but would ask the commission physician to make an examination if a foul was claimed on a blow he did not see.

Commission Doctor Don Knowlton later declared that he would leave the matter of a foul strictly up to the referee.

"It would take a very smart doctor to say whether a man had been seriously fouled immediately after a blow," Knowlton said. "I can say one things, I wish the referee would consult me before stopping the bout for any other injury. I warn the contestants that a cut eye will not be sufficient cause for stopping the bout unless the cut is in a dangerous position—and I don't care how bad it looks to the public. My business is to decide how bad it is, and that I shall do."

Then came the question of a referee for the bout. Maj. Harvey L. Miller, secretary of the commission, read a list of the qualified referees in the District, giving a background on each. He asked that any objections either Reilly or Erwin might have for any particular referee be voiced. None were.

Referee May Be Picked by Lot.

Erwin then asked how the referees were to be selected. He was told that was a matter of concern to the boxing commission alone and that the selection would not be made until ring time. Erwin then suggested that the third man in the ring be chosen by drawing a name out of a hat. Maj. Brown said that might be done, but that the commissioners would be the only ones who would know the referee's name —and they not until the final choice was made at the ratning.

"Suppose you select a referee," he suggested to Erwin.

"If there are any to whom you object, let us know," Maj. Brown insisted.

"Select the first man either Erwin or I object to," Reilly countered. "I am satisfied with anyone the commission appoints to referee.

Hupp Motor Corp. Plans to Resume

Cincinnati, May 8 (AP).—The U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld Judge Arthur J. Tuttle today in his opinion that contracts entered into between Archie M. Andrews, former chairman of the Hupp Motor Corporation, and the automobile concern were "unconscionable and fraudulent."

Detroit, May 8 (AP).—Alex J. Groesbeck, a director of the Hupp Motor Corporation, said today the company will take prompt steps to resume operations, which were suspended late last year because of inadequate working capital. He added:

"The decision will have a very salutary effect on the corporation. We expect to arrange for new working capital without difficulty. When that is done, we will be in a position to resume production within 30 days."

The corporation, one of the oldest in the industry, had a production last year of 900 cars a month.

France Checks Speculators in Foreign Monies

High Premiums Imposed; Franc Declines to New Low.

Paris, May 8 (AP).—Market officials today made speculation on foreign exchange in Paris virtually prohibitive by fixing premiums of 1.25 francs for three months on dollar operations and 6.75 francs on British pound operations.

Speculators, said financial experts, apparently have been expecting the devaluation of the franc since they already have been paying high premiums.

Today's rise in premiums marks them up from 80 centimes for the dollar and from 4.60 francs for the pound, making the premiums equivalent to 33 and 35 per cent interest, respectively, annually.

Thus speculators will only find it profitable if the franc should be devalued to more than 20 to the dollar and 100 to the pound within the next three months.

Resignation Rumors.

Premier Sarraut conferred with President Lebrun before Regnier went to the Elysee Palace, leading to rumors that the entire cabinet might soon resign. Official sources, however, said these rumors were unfounded.

The franc sagged to a new low in unofficial trading today as the government sought to prevent a financial panic.

The rate on the British pound, which has been reflecting the franc's weakness, rose from 75.55 francs to 75.66, while the United States dollar remained at 15.19 francs (6.58 cents to the franc) on the active foreign exchange market.

Leon Blum, Socialist Party leader who may be the next premier, announced he was watching the financial situation closely and expected to confer with Premier Sarraut.

Blum said he deplored yesterday's "sharp attacks on the franc and French securities" on the Bourse.

Financial sources attributed the break in the Bourse partly to selling orders from the provinces, where the people were reported buying gold or foreign money to hoard.

The French franc and French government securities have undergone repeated attacks in financial markets since the "people's front" of Socialists, Communists and Radical-Socialists won a sweeping victory in the recent parliamentary elections. There have been rumors, officially denied, that the franc might be devalued—removing it from the gold standard to which it has clung throughout the depression.

Earnings from all sources, after deducting all expenses incident to operations and provision for Federal income tax, were $4,586,795 in 1936 and $3,745,949 in the first three months of 1935.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent

Stocks Recover Mildly From Early Weakness and Close Irregular on Year's Dullest Day.

New York, May 8.—Financial markets were dull, steady at times, and inclined to recede at others. Stocks were weak at the start, recovered a little, and closed with prices irregular on a turnover of less than 1,000,000 shares, the smallest since August 30 of last year. September wheat dropped 1⅛ cents at a closing price of 84⅞ cents a bushel.

Week-end business news was of no great moment, but a ray of light penetrated the obscurity around Washington. News stories told that, apparently somewhat concerned at long last, President Roosevelt has taken note of advisers outside his little circles of brain busters and called in such competent industrialists as Owen Young, Walter Chrysler and Bernard Baruch.

Two of them at least are well-known Democrats, and while the course of action of the Administration suggests that their advice has been either unsought or ignored most of the time, the election is drawing on, uncomfortable questions are being asked, and now the case may be different. At least it ought not to hurt the Presidential ears to hear something said in the interest of the country in contrast to mere political planning and social theorizing.

Money Rates to Rise.

Money market rates were unchanged, but the banking district buzzed with preparations for a change in rates to be put into effect on Monday. Some of the leading banks, it was learned, have determined to lift the call and time rates, the first from three-quarter per cent, the long-tanding rate, to 1 per cent, and the other from 1 per cent to 1¼ per cent. Those increases will in no way reflect a hardening money market, for the market is, if anything easier, with the recent receipt of gold and increas in excess bank reserves.

They will mark an attempt of the banks to charge more because the character of call and time loans has changed, with the new margin rules of the Federal Reserve Board. The banks believe that brokers will consider security accommodation as worth more to them and the banks, for the new regulations in a way freeze brokers' loans made before May 1. To renew them in case of call the brokers would have to put up about twice as much collateral as before. Whether what some may regard as a squeeze play works remains to be seen, but most factors favor success.

Mixed Prices.

In stocks group movements were mixed. Virtually all the steel shares were lower. United States Steel and Bethlehem lost a point. Allied Chemical was a weak feature of the chemical group. Monsanto continued into new low ground. Anaconda was firm, but Kennecott dropped a point. Silver shares were higher, but Smelters fell a point. Motors and Chrysler were steady after early dips, partly on the good April sales report of General Motors. Rails were irregularly lower. Nickel Plate dropped nearly 2 points on a few sales, with the outbreak of trouble in the Van Sweringen system on the matter of Wheeling control.

Oils were unsettled. Standard of Jersey was helped by the prospect of lower charges on its refunding, but Socony sold around its lowest price of the year. Telephone recovered part of yesterday's loss. Other utilities were irregular. Mercantile shares were livelier than usual, especially some of the local department stores.

Ination Prospect.

Orderly devaluation of the franc ought to bring some improvement in French domestic business, and that surely would react to the benefit of other countries. Devaluation in principle is bad enough, but the constant fear of it probably is worse, and a speedy ending of the uncertainty would have certain advantages. In the end it ought to mean repatriation of foreign funds in this market with an outflow of gold. An outow of gold from here would tend to postpone the onset of ination in this country. Perhaps that is what speculative markets are fearing.

Banks to Raise Rate On Call Loans to 1%

New York, May 8.—Important banks expect to advance their lending rate for call money and for time loans on Monday to 1 and to 1¼ per cent, respectively. As a result of informal conversations between officers representing the larger lending banks during the last few days, the principal institutions have decided to attempt to place in effect on Monday morning a rate of 1 per cent for new, as well as existing call loans, compared with a present rate of three-quarters of 1 per cent established by like informal agreement at the end of last October. All banks are expected to adhere to any rate which may be fixed by the leading institutions.

For time money the rate of 1¼ per cent compares with a present rate of 1. The quotation for loans against exclusively Government securities collateral would be increased from one-half of 1 per cent to three-quarters of 1 per cent.

Markets are acting as though, in spite of the building of the foundation for inflation, the matter were not one of immediate concern. Perhaps that feeling has been encouraged by recent writings on the subject by economists and others. Many of them think that at most inflation is a long way off, and point to the history of inflation in other countries, and in this country, to sustain the theory that it takes years for confidence in a currency to diminish, and that a considerable business boom likely will precede inflation.

Commodity Prices to Rise.

Leonard P. Ayres, of the Cleveland Trust Co., holds to that idea. His latest reference to the subject, a pamphlet on inflation, gives five requisites for serious inflation in this country. They are (1) a business boom, (2) an actively rising stock market, (3) a period of bank credit expansion, (4) the stopping of gold exports, and (5) continuing national budget deficits. We have the last-named requisite in full measure and probably will continue to have it for some time. Number 4 is doubtful. The other two essentials are not visible at this time. We are in the way nevertheless, Ayres agrees, of a considerable rise in the cost of living.

Puts and Calls.

Now that the first rush of selling has subsided, the put and call market has narrowed a little. Only a few stocks have puts available at less than a point from the market, but many are quoted no more than a point away, including Gas, Public Service, United Aircraft, Montgomery Ward and Anaconda. Calls are still further from the market than puts. General Electric is an exception for a close market. Puts are three-quarters of a point down and calls are 1½ points up. Steel is 4 down and 5 up. Telephone is 9 down and 11 up. Chrysler is 4½ and 8. Johns-Manville is 9 and 11, which makes it hard for any holder to find security in the option market.

On The Air Today

Premier Mussolini will address the American people this afternoon at 5, using the facilities of the Columbia Broadcasting system. The talk will come from Rome by short wave. WJSV locally.

* * * *

"Professor Quizz" is coming to our Washington air tonight and I believe you're going to like him and his "brain-busters."

The Professor is capitalizing on the great favor in which we Americans have taken in the last few years to extending our general lore of knowledge of things important—and some not so important—through the playing of games.

The idea briefly is this: Eight persons, to be known as contestants, will become "members" of the Professor's "night school class of the air." Each person will pass before the Professor several times in the course of half an hour, and will be expected to answer questions of fact to the best of his ability.

I've heard the show in audition, and you'd be surprised to find how few fundamental things one really knows accurately and precisely. Simple things, the sort you thought you pinned down once and for all when you took eighth grade geography or pored over with consuming interest in the columns of The Post a day or two ago.

Jim McWilliams, vaudevile star of the last 20 years, will be professor. McWilliams is the fastest thing in radio today when it comes to quick wit, the kind demanded by spontaneous and absolutely unrehearsed situations such as occur in the "Professor Quizz" show.

The eight contestants will positively not be permitted to know in advance of the questions. In fact, the show is as unrehearsed as The Post's "Curbstone Queries" and as full of humorous, interesting situations.

The premiere is set for 8:30 tonight at WJSV. If you like it, you can become a contestant next week by applying to Prof. Quizz (McWilliams) and this is one show to which you are invited to be present at any time.

If you'd like to be a studio guest, just phone Me. 3200 and tell 'em you're coming down. They'll have a chair for you.
